tulips

A bouquet of tulips can be sweet or showy. Top: Cream-colored tulips dotted with grape hyacinths and surrounded by variegated ivy provide a fresh-from-the-garden feel ($150; Stonekelly, 212-245-6611). Right: "Even without other flowers, tulips carry tremendous beauty," says Jennifer Stone, N.Y.C. floral designer and co-owner of Stonekelly, of her sophisticated bundle of parrot tulips in citrus tones ($125). ■

Simple yet feminine, the calla lily is surprisingly hardy. Below: Hypericum berries nestle among callas and orange roses ($175; Stonekelly, 212-245-6611). Right: Miniature calla lilies, secured with organdy ribbon, create a spare, elegant bouquet ($150; Stonekelly). Opposite: Striking black callas are set off by ranunculus, tulips, seeded eucalyptus, miniature artichokes, scented geraniums and fern fronds ($200; Stonekelly).
