"Leading industry thinking in project success"

The Intelligent Projects Forum

Leading industry thinking in project success...

“Systems complexity, speed to market and delivery costs are significant challenges for all of us...

The Forum aims to focus on these key issues and to provide clarity and intelligence to facilitate improved project delivery.”

Peter Mayer
Managing Partner,
Pelicam Project Assurance

Founder members

In November 2010, a handful of senior executives met for the first time to share ideas and knowledge with their peers. They talked about their project challenges and frustrations and recognised how all concerned could benefit by optimising their individual and corporate project effectiveness.

Founder members included:

- Head of Programmes at Nationwide Building Society
- Chief Information Officer at Standard Bank
- Head of Programmes at The Financial Services Authority
- IT Strategy Director at The Financial Times
- Chief Information Officer at Transport for London
- Head of Business Programmes at Vodafone Global

“A forum that is dedicated to project success has enabled us to look at projects in a whole new light without the specific company challenges clouding our judgement”

Ian Campbell
CIO Transport for London

Key benefits

- Shared expertise and first-hand experience in topics of particular relevance to members followed by active discussion over dinner
- Facility to exchange ideas and experience, share industry intelligence, accepted thinking and future trends in a relaxed environment
- Access to all research and discussion material.

The Forum

- The Forum meets a minimum of four times a year at exclusive central London venues
- To ensure the agenda is both relevant and beneficial to our members the Forum is totally independent and is directed by the members for the members
- All discussions are conducted under Chatham House rules.

Research findings...

- Analysis of 50+ project assurance health checks
- Organisational themes and recovery agility
- Nine Serial Project Killers and The First Steps to Success
- Project Management Competency Framework at Nationwide involving 170 project managers.

“I particularly enjoy the IPF as it gives me an opportunity to look across industries, working practices and roles to confirm what we are doing as a company is broadly in line with others. I also get invited to many forums, however the only one I tend to go to is the IPF. The frequency is also good, not overkill”

Kevin Moylan
Head of Programme, Project and PMO Practices
Nationwide Building Society

Membership

- Members will be at director level or equivalent and are responsible for, or directly influence, their organisation's project delivery capability and performance
- Membership is by invitation only; the focus is to selectively invite the right people to enhance the group
- Membership is £1,000 per annum, which includes complimentary attendance to all events, access to the network (via the Forum) and all content produced.

“The forum allows an open and impartial discussion to provide insight and clarity to those industry challenges all businesses experience. It is a great opportunity to have a real level of debate with a diverse and discerning group of senior level executives in a relaxed but business focussed environment”
