The ability to track specific items sold to individual consigners using Sales by Category gives Tyson time to focus on running the business.

Background

Tyson Hamilton often thought about going into business for himself, but wondered what would make him happy and provide value to the residents in his hometown of Tooele, Utah. After spending several years in the mining industry, he decided the time was right and on April 16, 2015 opened Another Man's Treasures, an antique vintage and collectible shop. Tyson had learned a lot about the antique business from his mother, who runs a large antique shop in Salt Lake City. Over the last ten years, Tyson often found himself attending estate sales and helping his mother buy and consign various items for her shop so he had a good feel for what types of items customers most often looked for. Tyson loves the fact that he can offer items to fit every price range and every taste and that his store is helping revitalize other stores in the area by drawing in more customers looking for one-of-a-kind items.

Challenge

Since Tyson is a new entrepreneur, he knew there would be a learning curve to get Another Man's Treasures up and running. In addition to being new to QuickBooks accounting software, Tyson wasn't sold on the Point of Sale (POS) solution that most vintage and collectible owners use and wanted to find another way. Since he also consigns items for others, he wanted a system that could keep track of sales in a way that was conducive to how he was running the business.

Solution

While doing some research, Tyson met with a Clover Business Consultant and liked the different features the POS had to offer. He also appreciated that the Commerce Sync application could not only automatically transfer his daily sales information, but also included a Sales by Category feature that allowed him to keep track of different consigners and tie them to specific pieces in his inventory. The Commerce Sync Customer Experience team was very helpful during the initial set up and even suggested Tyson switch to QuickBooks Online to get the most out of the features he needed to effectively and efficiently run his shop.

“Commerce Sync has been a great addition to my business.”

Results

By using the Sales by Category feature to track different consigners and tie them directly to items sold each day, Tyson doesn't have to worry about time-consuming manual data entry and can instead focus on his customers. Commerce Sync gives him the time to do the things needed to keep the shop running successfully and allows him to easily pull sales reports so he can share them with his accountant when it comes time for quarterly taxes. “Commerce Sync has been a great addition to my business. I'd love to update my mother's store as well so she can stop spending so much time on manual data entry.”

Advice on starting your own business

If you have the opportunity – take it! Opening your own store is stressful and a lot of work, but it's worth it.
