SOMEONE ELSE'S HAND

Celebrating statements created by people of all ages throughout the South West

ABOUT SOMEONE ELSE'S HAND

This e-book, SOMEONE ELSE'S HAND, has been created by people across South West England who took part in workshops during our latest Discovery Project.

Called NAVIGATION: GLOBAL, this project consisted of workshops and performances that drew on influences from around the Atlantic Circle and encouraged people of all ages to explore a range of countries and landscapes in undiscovered corners of the world.

Workshop participants found out about new languages, cultures and ideas by working with us. Through our many workshops we encouraged people of all ages to think about the different lives of similar people from around the Atlantic Circle – from South Africa to North America – in a new way.

A selection of participants then wrote their own statements about what someone else, or what someone else's hand, might be doing on the same day, and at the same time, as they wrote their own thoughts down with their own hands. Some of these statements were inspired by pictures, images and proverbs collected from around the Atlantic Circle and shared during the workshops.

The resulting e-book, SOMEONE ELSE'S HAND, celebrates the statements created by people of all ages throughout the South West.

HOW TO USE THIS E-BOOK

Use the buttons on the interactive map and on each page to jump from group to group and see the participants' work for yourself.

You can also read about proverbs and sayings from around the Atlantic Circle at the top of each page.

AMY ROSE WILLIAMS

Today someone else has been to the tomato festival in Spain, showed me a tradition from their land and learnt something new

DAISY DAVIES

Today somebody else has had a tomato fight,
Had a tribal festival in the fading light,
Gone fishing in a sea different to my own,
Or rode a bike, boat and vehicle unknown,
Cooked a meal I wouldn't recognise,
Cycled to somewhere under blue skies.

Today someone else has done something unique,
Today I wonder of all the things I could seek,
If I stepped out the door,
Put one foot on the floor,
And see what the world might hold

ABOUT TANGLE

Tangle is South West England's African Caribbean theatre company.

We make theatre that enables people in South West England to refocus their perception of contemporary British identity. Through theatre productions and creative projects, we enable communities across South West England to engage with, and explore the UK's rich racial diversity.

In a region with a fast changing social demographic, we operate as a 'bridge builder' arts organization, creating inspiring projects for children and adults which instigate rich and generous dialogues between majority and minority racial groups.

Our company values reflect the need for generous, unembarrassed, positive 'two-way conversations' between practitioners that deliver and people that enjoy our work. The confident leadership adopted by our facilitators encourages everyone to ask questions and share ideas and problems without feeling fearful. We like to find ways to get people talking, connecting and understanding each other better, without fear of doing or saying the wrong thing.

Our approach at Tangle has four steps:

DISCOVER – provide multiple creative ways to involve people in our work

ENGAGE – start creative conversations in communities

CHALLENGE – the status quo and bring new emphasis

CHANGE – the way people think about race

Our company values are GENEROSITY, CONNECTIVITY, EXCELLENCE, RESPECT and UBUNTU – meaning togetherness.

These values reflect the approach we take when we tour across the region.

The work that we do at Tangle helps to ignite and develop new creative conversations by allowing a dedicated team of practitioners of African and Caribbean heritage to share different elements of their own culture with people who would not normally come into contact with them.
