Profile

Paige Dow PT, DPT has been practicing outpatient orthopedics since 2012 and has moved to Chicago in April 2016 from Boston, MA. She graduated with a Doctorate in Physical Therapy from Boston University and has fellowship training in manual therapy from the Institute of Orthopedic Manual Therapy in Woburn, MA.

Paige enjoys treating a wide variety of patients and she does speak Spanish. Specifically, she has a passion for working with children, patients with low back pain, and those with difficulties with balance. As someone who has been active in sports all her life, Paige enjoys working with all types of athletes. With every patient, she is devoted to provide quality and comprehensive care along with best evidence-based treatment plans.

Paige completed her undergraduate degree in Spanish and Psychology at University of Washington in Seattle, WA. In her free time, Paige likes to spend time with her family, be active outdoors and explore Chicago. She loves to ski, play soccer and bake cookies.
