Profile

Christine Marchinski, PT, DPT has been practicing outpatient orthopedics with Illinois Bone & Joint Institute since graduating from the Doctor of Physical Therapy program at Northwestern University's Feinberg School of Medicine. She practices at the Grayslake location with an emphasis on sports medicine in athletes of all ages and talent levels.

Christine believes that the integrative care model at IBJI provides patients with comprehensive treatment options that optimize outcomes and maximize function. Christine integrates her experience as a former collegiate volleyball player to relate to her patients during their rehabilitation. Although Christine specializes in treating sports-related injuries, she enjoys treating a variety of orthopedic conditions including postural disorders and total joint replacements.

Outside of work she spends her time with her friends and family, cooking, and coaching club volleyball.
