

Julie Sunday, PT, DPT

Physical Therapist

111 N Canal St, Suite LNW-2
Chicago, IL 60606

T (312) 414-1975

F (312) 414-1975

jsunday@ibji.com

Profile

Julie Sunday, PT, DPT has been a practicing physical therapist since 2007. Julie is originally from Michigan and she attended undergraduate school at Michigan State University and graduate schooling at Andrews University in Michigan. She began working at Illinois Bone and Joint Institute directly following school and practiced at the Glenview location for 10 years. Julie recently has been promoted and will be working as the Facility Manager at the West Loop location. In her time with Illinois Bone and Joint, Julie has built strong relationships with the physicians and staff and she believes in a collaborative care model to achieve the most successful outcome for each patient.

Julie treats all types of injuries and diagnoses with an emphasis on foot and ankle and sports medicine injuries of all ages. She has taken numerous continuing education classes dealing with all body parts and injuries. She performs running analyses and orthotic fabrication as well as compression wrapping for post surgical lower extremities and ergonomic assessments. Julie has coordinated company-wide continuing education courses on various topics including anatomy, diagnoses, and treatment for common foot and ankle conditions. She is also the Clinical Coordinator for Clinical Education for the physical therapy student program within Illinois Bone and Joint Institute. She loves working with new generations of physical therapists and promoting the field of physical therapy.

Julie has played numerous sports growing up and is an avid sports enthusiast which led her into the field of physical therapy. In her spare time, she loves being active in sports, running, spending time with family and friends and traveling.

Education

- BS, Exercise Science, Michigan State University
- Doctorate in Physical Therapy, Andrews University