

A stylized, colorful illustration of a rural landscape. At the top, a bright sun with rays is partially obscured by a blue cloud containing the year '2015'. Below the sun are rolling hills in shades of green and yellow, with a blue river or stream winding through the foreground. The overall style is clean and modern with bold colors and simple shapes.

Welcome to New Orleans and the 93rd Annual Louisiana Farm Bureau Federation Convention.
We're glad you're here and hope you enjoy your stay.

Many of us come to New Orleans each year to do the work of your organization, but also to be with friends and family we often only get to see this one time a year. Ours is a family convention and I hope you'll agree that with our youth events, Women's Leadership Committee, YF&R programs and our commodity conferences, our convention offers something for everyone.

For the last 93 years the Louisiana Farm Bureau Federation has stood by the state's farmers, ranchers and rural residents. Your membership in our organization is important because you determine the policies and guidelines that will shape the state's agricultural future. Farm Bureau depends first and foremost on grassroots involvement.

If this is your first time here as a volunteer leader I want to thank you and urge your continued involvement in our organization. If you're the proud parent of a local parish youth contest winner, I congratulate you. Even those of you who are like me and remember more conventions than we care to admit should find something new during our four-day gathering.

There will be a number of unique events at this year's convention. On Friday, we will hold a gubernatorial forum that will feature the major candidates for this year's election. The forum will be moderated by Jim Engster, who will ask questions of each of the candidates and give us a chance to see what their policy positions are on both agricultural topics and general issues. Mr. Engster will also broadcast his award-winning radio show live from our convention that afternoon and everyone is welcome to attend and enjoy complimentary refreshments.

Finally, we will be honoring Michael Danna, who passed from cancer this year, at a special presentation. Mike was our long-time director of public relations director, host of This Week in Louisiana Agriculture and a personal friend of mine. I'm sure you will see tributes to him all through this convention, but Friday morning, we will be showing a one-time encore presentation of the TWILA show dedicated to him.

Again, welcome to New Orleans! Please take time to savor the sights, sounds and tastes of this international tourist destination even as you help build our future in Farm Bureau. Thanks to your leadership our organization will remain the "Voice of Louisiana Agriculture."

Ronald R. Anderson

Louisiana Farm Bureau Federation President
