A Message from the Head of School

Dear alumni, parents and friends,

At the recent dedication of the Perkin Observatory at Dublin School I reflected on how the new building represents the sense of possibility that confronts all those of us who are fortunate to be a part of the Dublin School community. When I walk up the steep hill from Valley House every day to attend Morning Meeting, I am entering an international community of one hundred thirty students and sixty adults from ten countries and twenty states. It is a community where curiosity is fostered and thinking celebrated, where students and adults are challenged to take risks and pursue new opportunities, and where we strive to support and learn from one another both when we enjoy success or make mistakes.

In my short time at Dublin, I have witnessed the vision of one couple, Paul and Nancy Lehmann, who believed in the possibility of starting a transformative school for young people in the midst of a catastrophic economic downturn. Today we celebrate their vision and nurture the sense of possibility that they unleashed seventy-five years ago this year.

We have witnessed the possibility created by gifts to the School both large and small, of both dollar capital and sweat capital. We can look at the stars millions of light years away in the Perkin Observatory; we can sing, dance and act in a spectacular new Fountain Arts Building; we can row, sail and ski with the appropriate equipment on stunning lakes, trails, and hills. I witnessed the power of possibility just this summer when I was speaking with some trustees and we talked about how great it would be if we could bring downhill skiing back to Dublin for our seventy-fifth year. Now just three months later, with the help of generous trustee donors, we have constructed a beautiful ski area right in the middle of campus that we will name after former teacher and Coach Norm “Pro” Wight.

Ashley Arana ’11, Adelaide Key ’11 and Ja’Naya Stacey ’11
Most importantly, however, I see the sense of possibility in our students when they arrive here on campus each fall. I see their expressions when they leave their classes feeling supported, understood, and challenged by their teachers. I witness their sense of accomplishment when they overcome their fears and discover what is possible to accomplish when they work hard, overcome setbacks, and work closely with others.

We are fortunate to be in a position to celebrate seventy-five years at Dublin. While we look to the future and the next twenty-five years, it is also important to look back and celebrate all of the people: the headmasters, the teachers, the students, the alumni, the parents, the trustees, and our friends who have contributed their patches, both large and small, to this quilt that we know as Dublin. This place has a vibrancy and a soul that gives us strength as we set out to pursue new possibilities for our students.

A Message from Peter Imhoff,
President of the Board of Trustees

“We live in a moment of history where change is so speeded up that we begin to see the present only when it is already disappearing.” – R.D. Laing

We publish The Dubliner twice a year. A lot of effort goes into thinking about what would be relevant and interesting to the Dublin School family - especially to those who have not had the opportunity to visit campus in a while. Occasionally, we have needed to be exceptionally creative in developing an issue. These are not such times.

This issue of The Dubliner is intended to celebrate the opening of the Perkin Observatory. As detailed in these pages, this marvelous gift is opening our students’ and faculties’ eyes toward the distant past that is the visible light of the universe. The tremendous impact on our science curriculum is evident – nothing is more powerful than seeing something with our own eyes, especially through adolescent eyes. However, the lessons are not confined to science. The fact that we can look at history twinkling at us out of the blackness of space forces us to wonder. By making the immensity of existence real, it allows us to examine our lives and dreams in a much larger, and more humbling, context. Hopefully that wonder inspires the entire Dublin School community.

Going back to my initial thoughts however, there is so much happening at Dublin that it is hard to choose a topic for our semi-annual missive. A few examples that you will no doubt read about in greater detail in subsequent issues:

• The old AB has been completely rebuilt from the foundation up. It has been stretched, extended and raised, all with the goal of making it more functional and suited to its purpose. It has been renamed the Fountain Arts Building (in honor of David Fountain ’73 and his mother Marjorie, who are responsible for this project). At the opening, the promise of the building was realized with a performance by world-class cellist Dave Eggar (If you have ever wanted to see a classically trained cellist covering Jimi Hendricks, check it out at www.youtube.com/user/dublin1935.)

• A local trustee was doing some tree clearing. Sensing an opportunity, he sent the arborist to meet with our Head of School. Within days, the long overgrown view from the center of campus of the Pack Monadnock range, Crotched Mountain and Lower Field had re-appeared. Plans have emerged for a fruit orchard to be planted on the slope down to Lower Field. After many years, we have honored Mrs. Lehmann’s wish to restore this magnificent view-shed – without any cost to the school.

• At the same time, we cut two new ski slopes above New Dorm and the Art Studio and to the right of Memorial Field. A local excavator spent a couple of weeks picking a near infinite number of rocks and boulders out of the slope and re-grading the terrain to make an ideal environment for skiing and boarding. Work gang students were on the slope this fall cutting... roots and further grooming the trails. We have located and purchased a used Multi Ski lift (made in Grabenstatt, Germany) to transport skiers to the top of the hill. Alpine skiing is back on campus – now pray for snow!

- We have built a new service road into the back side of Lehmann. As unexciting as that sounds, it will provide a number of significant benefits to the school. It will allow us to build the proposed new Visual Arts Building without unduly disrupting or endangering our central campus. It will also reroute truck traffic so that deliveries will be made without backing across campus. This will improve safety and eliminate the annoying beeping associated with backing semi-trailers. Finally, it will allow us to achieve a long-term goal of eliminating cars in the center of our campus and removing the asphalt ribbon that bisects the Quad (if the asphalt offends you, donations toward its removal are welcome). What was totally unexpected, was how beautiful the service road would be. A number of our cross country skiers are wondering how to take full advantage of it.

- We have received gifts of six 420 Sail Boats. These boats came out of the Hyannis Yacht Club and make a great little matched racing fleet. They are in terrific shape and evenly matched. This gift has revitalized our sailing program – leading to our first interscholastic regatta on Dublin Lake in a number of years (and yes, rumor has it that we won against both Northfield Mt. Hermon and Cardigan Mountain School). The Wheeler family (parents of Tucker ’12) were the driving force behind this great gift.

- We have also received a gift of a brand new, state-of-the-art Vespoli four-person racing shell. The revitalization of the crew program over the last several years made it clear that our existing boats, while charming, were no longer competitive (the Viking shields on the side should have given us a hint...). The American-built Vespoli is considered one of the finest shells in the world and such schools as Yale and Williams won NCAA championships in these boats last year. Tim Steele (parent of Erik ’11 and Jillian ’13) donated this racing shell in honor of their grandfather.

All of this change reminds me of a conversation I had with one of our trustees. She recently went back to her boarding school and was discouraged by the impact of change. In its enthusiasm for bigger and better, it had lost all of its touch-points with its past. I believe that we have not suffered this impact. Importantly, we are acutely conscious of this potential dilemma. The changes that we have made honor and reinforce Dublin School’s past. Our focus continues to be on using the great outdoors as a classroom and athletic field. More than ever, young people need to get outside and experience the challenges that come with honest work.

I recently talked with a first-year student from New York. His work gang had built a bridge. With bubbly pride, he told me it was the first time that he had ever hefted a hammer. To me, that is an important victory.
We have been anticipating this day for some time and it is wonderful to have such a supportive crowd in attendance. This beautiful observatory represents to me everything that is special and unique about Dublin School. It represents the sense of possibility that confronts those of us who are fortunate to be a part of this community.” These words from Head of School, Brad Bates, commenced the dedication ceremony.

With over 200 people in attendance, Brad explained how the observatory came to be. “This sense of possibility began with the vision of one man. John Gray, class of 1988, studied our school’s campus master plan when it came out in 2008 and saw a small stone gazebo structure on this field that our architect had added almost as an afterthought. The architect wanted to draw people’s attention to this point of our campus to remind them that it even extended this high. John Gray took one look at that structure scribbled on the paper and said that we should build an observatory on Memorial Field on that very spot. John’s statement started the wheels rolling and trustee David Howe called his friend Landon Clay who suggested we visit the Clay Observatory at the Dexter Southfield School. There we met a very enthusiastic Ron Dantowitz, the Director of the Clay Observatory, who encouraged us to think BIG about our observatory. When I returned from this visit I called John Gray to share all that we had learned. John paused after “Science, the attempt to make rational sense of the world around us, begins with carefully looking at that world. Astronomy has the advantage that the objects we are looking at are so beautiful and astonishing that simply to see them is to be moved. Too often we forget to look up, to think on the stars, the patterns of their motion, and to use what we see to better understand our place in the universe. The sky becomes commonplace if we let it. But looking through our telescope at Jupiter and its bright, ever shifting, little moons, as Galileo did, forces us to join him in reexamining our beliefs about our position in the heavens. The sky cannot seem commonplace after we have taken the time to see it more carefully. Our new facility gives us access to vast gas clouds, brilliant star clusters, unimaginable without a telescope, and galaxies of a remoteness that surpasses any understanding. The Perkin Observatory is transforming science at Dublin by transforming our ability to see the world beyond us.”

– Jonathan Weis, Director of the Perkin Observatory. Dedication 2010

my long description and said, “Brad, my mother Winnie and the rest of the Perkin Fund Board want to do this right. We want to make sure that the school has what it needs to build a state-of-the-art observatory in honor of my grandfather Richard S. Perkin.”

Richard S. Perkin, co-founder of the Perkin-Elmer Company, had a life-long passion for astronomy. As John’s mother, Winnie Gray, explained, “Many, many years ago when my father, Richard Perkin, was 8 years old he was given a very small toy – a telescope. I think his father maybe thought it would be a toy but no, he loved this telescope, he went out and looked at the stars as best as he could. He went to the library and borrowed books and looked at maps, everything he could get his hands on about astronomy. About 3 years later he built his own telescope. My grandmother took to horror when she saw him standing out on the balcony looking at the stars out of the New York apartment about to fall off into the street!”

“I knew when we were walking around up here you weren’t ready to retire yet so I had to come up with something for you to do,” recalls John Gray reflecting back on the day he and favorite teacher Carl von Mertens looked over the master plan during reunion weekend. Carl, long time Dublin science teacher and now member of the Dublin School Board of Trustees, offered his services to volunteer to build the building, allowing the School to construct even more than had originally been hoped for. With the observatory built, the new Director of the Perkin Observatory, Science Chair Jonathan Weis, began purchasing the materials that Ron Dantowitz had so carefully chosen for the building. Once the telescope was installed, the School was honored to have David and Louisa Birch ’57, take advantage of David’s considerable scientific and engineering knowledge to work with Larry Ames, the most brilliant Buildings and Grounds worker you will ever meet, to complete the intricate and time consuming process of aligning the telescope. “I am absolutely thrilled with how well it has turned out, much more impressive than I ever imagined it could be,” says John Gray ’88.

Commenting on what the observatory has meant and will mean to Dublin School, Brad continued by saying, “Thanks to the Gray family and the trustees of the Perkin Fund, Dublin School was building at a time when very few schools were building. The buzz spread throughout New England and helped us to double the size of our freshmen class in just one year. The donation of the Perkin Observatory inspired others to support Dublin School and led to a record fundraising year for our small school. The Perkin Observatory will also stand at the forefront of our efforts to further connect with the people and institutions of the Monadnock Region in the spirit of our founder, Paul Lehmann. Thanks to this gift and previous gifts from the Perkin Fund, Dublin School can say proudly that we have an advanced science program in our school that will inspire curiosity and scientific thinking in generations of Dublin students.”

“There is an old farmer that lives up the road in Chesham. He farms his grandfather’s farm, a farm that has been in his family since before the Civil War. He heats the main house with wood and splits a couple of cords every year in preparation for the long New England winter.

If you ask the farmer about his life, the conversation invariably comes around to his favorite, most faithful tool. You see, he uses the axe that his father and grandfather used before him. With evident pride, he will tell you: Yup, this is my grandfather’s axe. I’ve only changed the handle three times and changed the head twice.

To our farmer, despite the fact that nothing actually remains of the original axe, it remains his grandfather’s axe.

And to us, this remains Paul and Nancy Lehmann’s School.

As we enter our 75th year, the paradox of the farmer’s axe is something to ponder. Like the axe, we would be hard pressed to find anything that actually remains from what the Lehmanns’ began with.

Where we sit now was a wooded lot. The early school buildings that we treasure: Lehmann, the School House and the Pump House, while authentic to their character if not purpose, have been altered and repaired countless times over the years. One of the “newer” buildings, the AB is vivid proof of our ability to reuse and reinvent our past.

Would we not all agree that despite changing the axe head and the handle many times, that Dublin remains Mr. Lehmann’s School?”

– Peter Imhoff, Board of Trustees President
On June 5, 2010, the Class of 2010 graduated on an idyllic morning surrounded by family and friends from around the country and five continents.

Retiring faculty member, Caleb Davis, began the ceremony with a moving invocation followed by welcoming remarks from Brad Bates and Board of Trustees President Peter Imhoff. Student speakers Perrin Herman ’10 and Sunny Zhen ’10 gave heartfelt speeches, reminding us that the process is more important than the product or any title earned. The graduation address was given by trustee Carleton Ladd ’60 who led everyone in singing Happy Birthday to Dublin School, marking the beginning of the 75th Anniversary celebrations, and exhorted the seniors to “learn another language” whether it be an actual dialect or a field of expertise through which to communicate and act in the world. Former Dean of Students, John Marquis, returned to campus to give the Senior Goodbye, telling students “Don’t let anyone else define you,” and concluding by having the seniors recite his immortal advice: Work Hard and Make Good Decisions. We send our seniors to their further adventures with pride, confidence, high hopes and a lump in the throat.

“When you leave here today you will leave with the voices of Dublin inside you. These may be voices you did not fully hear while at school, but they will forever be part of your education, and you will find that you will hear them at unexpected times throughout your lives.”

– Brad Bates, Head of School

“Dublin still has the pioneer spirit that I love and it has been very exciting and rewarding to be here at this time. I have been blessed… This tent, for these short hours, is filled with the Dublin family of 2010. Graduation day is the day that I am most aware of how the whole is greater than the parts.”

– Caleb Davis, Teacher
“Believe in yourself, don’t let anyone ever define who you are. That’s your job. My final words of advice, and I think you know what they will be: Work hard and make good decisions.”

– John Marquis, Dean of Students

“Here at Dublin, the word “community” is thrown around a lot – but I can promise you that this is more than just a buzzword cooked up by the admission department. This is the kind of environment where you learn the things that can’t be taught.”

– Perrin Herman, Class of ’10

“Fall in love with the process and results will follow. Just try. Love acting more than you want to be an actor. Love healing more than you want to be a doctor. Love painting more than you want to be an artist. Love teaching more than you want to be a teacher. The job is in the process.”

– Zhen (Sunny) Zeng, Class of ’10
Dublin School 2010 Academic Awards

Scott C. O’Neil Award
Erik Steele ’11
Hancock & Rindge, NH
This award is given in memory of Scott C. O’Neil (who died in a motorcycle accident after his junior year) to that member of the junior class who, in the opinion of the faculty, best exemplifies the spirit of Dublin School.

Wellesley Book Award
Meredith Hoffman ’11
Duxbury, MA
This award is given to that woman who, in the opinion of the faculty, is Dublin’s strongest female member of the junior class, a young woman who has made an outstanding contribution to her school in terms of leadership, citizenship and scholastic achievement.

H. William Evans Community Service Award
Yuri Tsuchida ’11
Ipswich, MA
The faculty determines this award. The criteria include a demonstrated strong sense of commitment to community service and the potential to become a leader in the Dublin School community.

Paul W. Lehmann Award
Christopher Riley ’10
Milton, MA
This award is named after Dublin’s founding headmaster and is given by the faculty to that member of the graduating class who best exemplifies sturdiness of character, academic vigor, and excellence of influence in all areas of school life.

Dartmouth Alumni Club
Douglas Gibson ’12
Waterford, VA
This award is given to a sophomore who excels in English and is involved in extra-curricular activities. The book is given by the Dartmouth Alumni.

Edward O’Donnell ’11
Centerville, MA
Charles Imhoff ’13
Dublin, NH
The Molly Shugrue “Shooting Star Award”
Awarded in memory of Elizabeth “Molly” Shugrue, Dublin School 1998-2000, presented to those students with outstanding acting talents and promise.
Nancy Lehmann Tour Guide Award
This award is given for their dedication to the School and their position as School ambassadors.

Julian Lind ’10  Richard Thackston ’10
Lawrence, MA  Troy, NH

Perrin Herman ’10
Acton, MA

H. William Evans Faculty Award
Larry Ames
Francestown, NH

The recipient of the Faculty Achievement Award is determined by the Head of School based on the accomplishments of the teacher or staff member who, in the opinion of the Head of School, deserves the honor. Criteria for the award normally include effort and achievement beyond the call of duty.

Charles Latham Jr.
Distinguished Faculty Award
Jason Bennett
Dublin, NH

The recipient of this award is chosen by a special committee which includes the Head of School, Dean of Academics, student representatives and a current parent. This award is honoring an exceptional Dublin School teacher.

Edward Whitney Distinguished Student-Athlete Award
Ryan Limero ’10
Belchertown, MA

This award is intended to honor a student-athlete who not only exhibits great athletic ability, but does so with honorable sportsmanship. Named in honor of a great Dublin School friend, Trustee, and benefactor, Ned Whitney H ’91 and determined by the Athletics Department and Head of School, the award is given annually to one Dublin student-athlete who embodies the mission of the school and the athletics department. This student-athlete routinely exhibits sportsmanship, teamwork, dedication, and a passion for his or her activities while maintaining a high level of diligence to improve their skills and the experience of their teams.

Dublin School Class of 2010
Graduating with Honors
Sung Ho Kim, Zachary Firat Forrest Doenmez,
Ryan Christopher Limero, Kyungtae Dean Kang, Ki Hyuck Lee, Dunzhe Tang, Amber Lynn Beam, Emily Elizabeth Rueggeberg, Sarah Chanil Clinchy, Sara Hayden Schultz, and Zhen Zeng.
Richard Connell
Coach, Buildings & Grounds, Dorm Parent
Rich is a 2007 graduate of Franklin Pierce University (FPU) with a double major in Psychology and Computer Science, and is currently completing a Master of Science in Sports Management. An accomplished rower, Rich was captain of the FPU Men’s Rowing Team and assistant coach for the team for two years as a graduate student. Currently, Rich is a member of the Merrimack River Rowing Association (MRRA) and competitive rower for a team out of Lowell, Massachusetts. An avid outdoorsman, Rich led the 2007-2008 Pre-Orientaion Wilderness Trips for FPU and in 2009 was trip leader for the Pierce Walk in Europe which consisted of 15 college students backpacking through Europe for 4 months.

In addition to coaching Dublin’s crew, sailing, and skiing teams, Rich is a dorm parent in Hoyt Horner and works with our building & grounds crew to maintain and improve the School’s waterfront facilities on Dublin Lake and campus ski trails.

Dawn Doncaster
Kitchen Staff
After many years of working in the banking business, Dawn found her true passion - cooking. She began work at the Riverview Café in Brattleboro, Vermont as a waitress and then moved on to be a line cook and a caterer. In addition to her work at the café, Dawn taught cooking lessons at the Vermont Cooperative Extension.

Dawn lives in Nelson, New Hampshire with her husband and children. In her free time, you can find her in her kitchen at home making her family meals, going on long walks and relaxing on the dock while reading the latest novel. With her years of experience in making delicious healthy dishes, all of us at Dublin are in for a treat.

Jennifer Foreman
Tutor and Coach
Jenny relocated to her home state of New Hampshire after 17 years of living in New York City, where she was a professional dancer and private tutor. Jenny is a graduate from Barnard College (Magna Cum Laude) with a degree in Dance/Theater. Prior to Dublin, Jenny tutored in several private schools including Horace Mann, The Dalton School and Marymount School for Girls. She also served on the faculty at Barnard College and the Graham School from 1999-2010 and as a guest faculty at SUNY Purchase, The Alley School, The Usdan Center for Creative and Performing Arts, and the Neighborhood Playhouse.

Her performance career has included being a principal dancer for Buglisi/Foreman Dance, performing with the Martha Graham Dance Company, touring the US with the Graham Ensemble, and creating dance educational and performance collaborations as co-founder, with her husband, of On Common Ground.

In addition to being a full-time tutor, Jenny will be working with Erika Rogers as part of the dance program at Dublin School.

Jesse Jackson
Tutor, Dorm Parent and Coach
Jesse is a 2002 graduate of Indiana University with a Bachelor of Arts (Magna Cum Laude) in Outdoor Recreation and Resource Management. Before coming to Dublin, Jesse was on the faculty at Boston University’s Sargent Center for Outdoor Education and worked for the University of Rhode Island’s Alton Jones Outdoor Science Program. He led many wilderness trips for high school groups, which included backpacking, climbing, canoeing, mountain biking, and sea kayaking. Jesse was the coach of the 2010 girls’ basketball team and this year will coach soccer, basketball, and tennis along with being a dorm parent and a tutor for the Learning Skills program. During his free time, Jesse enjoys adventuring in the woods, writing, and playing guitar.

Dylan Pierpont
Buildings & Grounds and Dorm Parent
Dylan, a graduate of Vermont Academy, is no stranger to the small community lifestyle of a college preparatory school. After high school, he went on to receive his Bachelors degree in Natural Resources Management and Policy, with concentrations in environmental studies and fish and wildlife at Paul Smith’s College.

In addition to his work as a member of the Buildings & Grounds crew, Dylan leads a work gang crew on Saturday mornings and is a dorm parent in Lehmann House.

Dylan has a passion for hockey and has played his entire life. He is looking forward to offering his knowledge to Dublin’s pond hockey program and helping with lacrosse and weight training.

Lucy Shonk
Annual Fund Director
After graduating from Emerson College, Lucy began her teaching career at Dublin, taking over for Jan Haman who was on sabbatical. She also directed several productions including “The Time of Your Life” and “A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum.” Lucy loved the year of teaching/directing so much that she decided to get her MED from Keene State College and went on to teach English and Theatre at Conval High School in Peterborough. She continued her theatre connection with Dublin School’s Summer Theatre and was also involved for many years with the Peterborough Players as a non-equity actress and a Board member.

For 23 years, Lucy worked in the Admissions Department at Franklin Pierce and eventually became Dean of Admissions. Before coming to Dublin, she was the Development Director at Monadnock Family Services.

Lucy has been a Big Sister for ten years and now serves as President of the Board of Big Brother Big Sisters of Western New Hampshire. She sings in the Dublin Community Church choir, plays golf and paddle tennis, loves to swim in Dublin Lake and is very happy to be back at Dublin School.
I feel very fortunate to be in my second year at the helm of the Athletics Department while the School celebrates its 75th Anniversary. It has given me reason to take pause and reflect on Dublin athletics of the past, present and future. We continue to develop and compete in the core team sports of soccer, basketball, tennis, and lacrosse; all sports that have enjoyed a successful and storied history on the hill. But I have also made it my intention to reintroduce our students to those sports that have defined Dublin School in the past and are setting Dublin apart from other small schools - sailing, skiing, and crew.

In the fall of 2009, Dublin once again took to the waters of Dublin Lake. With the gift of four small sailing vessels our students were re-introduced to the recreational sport of sailing and basked in the beauty and serenity of the lake. This fall Dublin School invaded the lake with an armada of racing boats and our newly formed Sailing Team competed for the first time in nearly a decade. Thanks to a gift from the Wheeler Family, Dublin students will once again face-off with other New England prep schools to prove their mastery of their sailing craft. Sailing and use of Dublin Lake have been the subjects of Innumerable stories from our alumni and so, too, now will our current students have the opportunity to make memories on the water.

Beginning last winter with the re-establishment of the Nordic ski program and with the current opening of the Norm Wight Ski Area, skiing has enjoyed a new breath of life at Dublin. For many years our students flocked to the slopes at nearby Crotched Mountain for recreational skiing and snowboarding. In 2009-10 we required all skiers and boarders to participate in racing instruction. This winter we will race in the Lakes Region Alpine Ski series and in the NEPSAC GS and LS Championships. The new slope on campus has only re-energized our students and the appointment of David Stone and Rich Connell to the ski coaching staff ensures that our students will be fully prepared to ski and compete with some of the best prep skiers in New England.

For ten years Caleb Davis shared his passion for Crew with Dublin Students. In his final season he was able to lead this team to compete in various local venues. With the gift of a new racing shell from current parent, Tim Steele, we will be able to continue this new tradition and give our students the opportunity to compete on an even level with other prep crew programs. The Dublin Crew team will practice and host races at Thorndike Pond. Just as in the fall and winter, Dublin students will spend their spring outdoors taking advantage of and experiencing our extended campus.

If you would like to learn more about the athletic program at Dublin School, please contact Brooks Johnson at (603) 563-1246 or bjohnson@dublinschool.org
Norm “Pro” Wight Ski Area
Save the Date

Skiing comes back to Dublin School campus on Sunday, January 16, 2011!

Come join us for a day of skiing and snowboarding with classmates, students, family and friends as we dedicate Dublin’s new on-campus ski slope – The Norm “Pro” Wight Ski Area. For more details or to register for the event, please call Anne Mackey, Assistant to the Head of School, at (603) 563-1223.
Thank You!

Thank you to our trustees, alumni, parents, friends, faculty and staff, last year was simply amazing in terms of fundraising. The final total for all gifts and pledges for the fiscal year July 1, 2009 - June 30, 2010 was $2,558,259.78. To say that excitement and gratitude seems to be bursting out of every corner of our School is not an exaggeration! Meeting last year’s annual fund goal of $325,000 while raising over $2 million in capital and special gifts was simply extraordinary. This on top of the many gifts-in-kind and volunteer hours given to the School, illustrate the incredible amount of support shown by all.

We are extremely grateful for those of you who give loyally each year to Dublin School. Because of your generosity, Dublin School is able to stay true to its core values of helping students awaken a curiosity for knowledge, recognize their potential, learn the value of meaningful work, and live their lives with truth and courage.

With our thanks,

Questions or corrections should be addressed to Erika Rogers, at (603) 563-1230 or erogers@dublinschool.org.

We have made every effort to be as accurate as possible in recognizing all those who have contributed to Dublin School in the fiscal year July 1, 2009 to June 30, 2010. If your name has been listed incorrectly or omitted, please contact the Development Office at (603) 563-1232.

Lehmann Legacy Circle

The strength of Dublin School’s future endowment is in large part due to the foresight and support of those who have chosen to include Dublin School in their estate plans. The Lehmann Legacy Circle serves to honor their confidence and vision. Members of the Dublin community who have established bequests, life income gifts, or charitable trusts recognize the value of a Dublin School education and their responsibility to help preserve this opportunity for future generations.

If you have Dublin School in your estate plans and have not notified the School or would like more information on how to do so, please contact Erika Rogers, Director of Development and Alumni Affairs at 603-563-1230 or erogers@dublinschool.org.
When Disaster Struck
Life after a catastrophe

My name is Cindy McGinty. My husband Mike lost his life while working in the World Trade Center on September 11.

Mike graduated from the US Naval Academy in 1981 and was honorably discharged as a Lt. Commander in 1989. He worked hard in his career at Marsh McLennan in the Power and Utilities Group. He was a loving husband and a fantastic father to our two beautiful sons. Together, we were involved in our church and our community. And he kept our yard looking fantastic which I will tell you about in a minute.

He was a good man.

Why do bad things happen to good people like Mike?

Millions asked that exact same question following 9/11. I certainly did many times and I finally discovered the answer – at least what the answer is for me. But before I tell you what it is, I want to tell you how I figured it out.

My sons, Daniel and David, and I were the only ones living in Foxboro, Massachusetts who lost a family member on 9/11. Daniel was 8 at the time and David was 7. On the street where we lived, everyone took pride in their homes and after 9/11 it was my fear that people would know where the Widow McGinty lived.

Then Disaster Struck

Life after a catastrophe Needless to say, in the days and weeks after Mike died, keeping up the lawn was not my first priority – and so, as I said – I was afraid everyone would know where the “Widow McGinty” lived.

That is, until the day that Chris Mitchell showed up.

I didn’t know Chris very well. He’s a longtime resident of Foxboro – very involved in the Cub Scouts and Boy Scouts – and he runs a local landscaping firm. But a couple of weeks after 9/11, without asking, he shows up and mows my lawn. A week after that, he did it again. And then a week later, he did it again. I said, “Chris …” And he said “Cindy, don’t worry about it. Focus on your sons, focus on your life, leave your lawn to me and my guys.”

Then on the very first Mother’s Day following 9/11, Chris says, “Cindy, there are a few extra things we need to do around the house. Don’t worry about it, but you may see some extra activity, okay?” Okay, Chris.

The next thing I know, plants start being delivered and trees start coming down and Chris – along with a team of Boy Scouts and their fathers converge on my yard and – for Mother’s Day – they re-landscaped my front yard and laid down a walkway to my front door. And they planted a tree in Mike’s memory in the front yard.

True to his word, every week Chris or someone from his crew, continued to show up.

Every week for the next eight years Chris Mitchell took care of my home … never accepting a dime. Giving new meaning to the words “Never forget.”

Fortunately for Chris, we moved to Connecticut last December.

And so why do bad things happen to good people? For me, it is so that good people might go on to do more good things for others.

With Chris as my role model, I have helped to start the Mass Military Heroes Fund which provides support services and programs to military families in Massachusetts who have lost loved ones in Iraq and Afghanistan. The Mass Military Heroes Fund was the idea of the late Senator Edward M. Kennedy and was supported by many of the Massachusetts 9/11 families. Many families have told us that their sons and daughters enlisted because of 9/11 because of what happened to Mike and others.

Would I have been so involved in helping others if I had not lost Mike? Probably not.

Would I have been so involved if not for Chris Mitchell showing me the value of helping others in need? Probably not.

Is it possible – as horrible is it was – that there are blessings that came from 9/11? Yes, absolutely.

Cindy McGinty gave the following speech at the Beacon Theatre in New York on September 11, 2009 as an annually observed National Day of Service and Remembrance.

26 Envisioning a World of Possibilities
Not many people watch their father die on CNN. I did, and that image stays with you. “Extreme trauma to the extremities” that was what killed him, officially. Not fire, not falling, not shock, not the fact that a commercial jet plane just flew into him: trauma.

I can only imagine what his last moments were like. And I often do. He was on the 99th floor of the North Tower, the first one that was hit. He was where the plane hit.

Because we lived in Massachusetts, and my father wasn’t on a plane, and because we didn’t live in New York, and my father worked in the towers, we were hardly noticed at all. All of the aid programs in New York seemed to care for firefighters, police officers, and workers in the towers who lived in New York or New Jersey: all of the aid programs in Massachusetts (of which only a handful actually existed, but those were preexisting organizations, such as the Salvation Army) were for people who were on the planes, not in the towers.

Even at his funeral, we had to fight.

On top of that, the airlines refused to acknowledge that we even existed, beyond our signatures that we wouldn’t sue them. We needed to fly out to New York City days later, and they wouldn’t give us any sort of discount because “he wasn’t on the plane” (my mother, in a fit of rage, pointed out that he was “all over the plane.”)

We get so much mail for him, and not just typical junk mail, either. We get voting pamphlets, bills. It’s almost not funny. You’d think that after nearly a decade they would take a hint.

During the 2008 Presidential Election, we got a letter from Rudy Giuliani’s campaign: he would keep America safe, and could we donate. The letter was addressed to my father. My mother decided to call the campaign offices. When my mother pointed out that our father was deceased, and that they of all people, should know this, the response was “we can’t micromanage our phone lists.” My mother, furious, asked how they could run the country if they couldn’t manage a phone list. We didn’t get an answer.

Within days of 9/11, Senator Ted Kennedy called all of the Massachusetts families and told them if there was anything he could do to just tell him. After my mother went to New York, she began to prepare a memorial service for my father. We couldn’t have a regular burial, because we didn’t have his body. (Later we ended up having two funerals, several years apart, as his remains were not intact. We still don’t have the whole body; just the majority of it.) My mother called the Navy, because she wanted an honor guard at the funeral, as my father served in the Navy. She was unable to find discharge papers. The Navy did not want to talk to us, or to fix the problem. My mother called Senator Kennedy, and within 24 hours they had it straightened out: we had an honor guard at my father’s (first) funeral.

One month after 9/11, my mother had enough: before that she was shy, never asked for much. Now, she was frustrated because of all of the agencies there were out there saying they were helping people, and getting press coverage for it. As she puts it, “the families weren’t seeing the dollars.” Nobody knew how they were going to live, if they were going to see a paycheck, if they would be able to keep their homes, if they would get life insurance or social security benefits. With the current system, one phone call led to nine more. At the meeting, all of the agencies: the FBI, Social Security, the Red Cross, The Massachusetts Office of Victims Assistance, and others stood up and described how they were helping us. My mother, after months of getting nowhere, getting nothing, just wanted to have life return to the closest thing it could be to normal, to not be known as “the 9/11 widow” in town. At the end of the presentations, she raised her hand, and said, “I know that you all think that you are helping, but what you’re really doing is getting in our way. I have two small children, am totally grief-stricken, and can barely get out of bed in the morning. All of you have forms to fill out that require the same information, and require the same documentation. It’s too much to handle at this point. If you want to help, make the process easier.” After the meeting, Senator Kennedy provided each family with an “advocate” to help them do as much or as little as that family was ready to do. This was our first real step in moving on.

From this time our family became friends with Senator Kennedy; we even went sailing with him, became friends with his staff, and when he died, we were invited to sit and watch over the body for an hour, while hordes of people walked by, which is what happens at a Kennedy funeral, traditionally.

Whenever something, pretty much anything, happens, they play clips of the towers on the news, and remind us that we’re living in a “post-9/11” world. Now, mentioning 9/11 is but a political move, to instill fear and turn the masses into voting one way. Look at Giuliani’s presidential campaign: his city was attacked under his watch, and he plays it off as a positive thing, that he was the only reason that the city is still around today, and not the people who actually put their lives on the line, or even died, on that day.

For some, 9/11 became them. Others, it defined them. Me? It fuels me. I don’t let it define me, I let it empower me. I overcame that. As I can the next challenge, and every one after that.

Alumni/Student Lacrosse Game

Dublin School would like to say a special “Thank You” to Spencer Norcross’86 for organizing a fantastic Alumni vs. Dublin Varsity lacrosse game. Dressed in authentic lacrosse jerseys and joined by Dublin School lacrosse coach, LP Runyon ’88, the “old guys” triumphed 6-2, amid cries of “Foul” by the varsity youngsters. A great time was had by all and plans for a rematch are already being made for Alumni Weekend this coming May. (There is even talk of the alumnae/girls joining the fun!)

In remembrance and in special honor of Todd Walier ’84 members of the class of 1983 and I set out to hike Mt. Monadnock during Dublin’s Alumni Weekend.

I had serious reservations, in the back of my mind, on my drive over to Dublin School as to whether or not our hike would actually take place due to the foul heavy weather that had descended upon us in the region. I should have known better given the persevering character of my fellow Dubliners. It was never a matter of if we would hike Monadnock; it was a matter of what time were we going to push off to start the climb!

The day began with us all gathering at Lehmann House for a nourishing breakfast and time to discuss what trail we would use for the ascent. It quickly was decided that John Brennan ’83, Tracey Bean ’83, and Chris Behn ’83, Brian Hand ’83 and Rob English ’86 would set out on this foggy, rainy, and very windy 45 degree day via the Dublin Trail.

As we set forth on the climb from the Dublin Trail Head it became clear to me that this was going to be a very special day on many levels for all of us. John, Tracey, Chris, Brian and I all fell into instant wonderful conversation as we shared stories and memories of Todd Walier and our past experiences while we were at Dublin School. We reminded ourselves many times over with our exchanged stories about what a kind, fun loving, gentle, and humorous friend Todd was to us all.

Pushing on during our climb, and steeped in serious, silly, and laugh-filled discussions, the rain picked up greatly in intensity. In that time our group never gave the weather conditions a second thought; we were almost oblivious to the fact that it was a moderately rainy day.

The camaraderie and friendship within our group during the hike truly highlighted all that is wonderful about Dublin and it defined in a real and meaningful way what outstanding, intelligent, interesting, and caring Alumni we have and how strong the bonds that were forged 25 +/- years ago remain.

As we made our way up the mountain in Todd’s memory. I was struck by the fact that I was with such a special group that cared deeply enough to have made this climb possible and that I was with Alumni that symbolize our “Dublin School Spirit” to its fullest and deepest meaning.

On a very personal note, about half way up Monadnock, I began to slow my legs, neurologically speaking and I was beginning to hold back my hard charging group of athletic Dublin Alumni hikers. Back in May of 2009 I had to have emergency neck surgery where I had to have a herniated disk removal and disk replacement due to a severely slipped disk compressing on my spinal cord. It had been almost one year to the day that I was now hiking our rugged Mt. Monadnock. At times when I get fatigued from exertion my legs, neurologically speaking can get sluggish and my walking cadence slows down. Tracey Bean had an important family obligation later in the afternoon and she had to summit Monadnock and get back down efficiently and in time to make her event. I told our group to keep pushing on at their stout pace and I would see them on the summit. This climb meant too much to have me disrupt our group mission!

John, Tracey, Chris and Brian all kindly and affectionately gave me every out to turn back and head down the mountain. “Rob, there is no need to be a hero; you can turn back now if that would be best for your health,” I was gently told. That was NOT going to happen I insisted, and I promised everyone that I was fine and that I was most definitely going to summit; I was just going to be behind them due to my now slower pace.

John, Tracey and Chris marched onward at my absolute insistence so Tracey could stay on schedule and Brian Hand decided to stay back with me to keep a more careful eye on me and my well being; so it seemed to me. (Brian’s hanging back with me gave the chance to truly catch up with him and made for a very special experience.)

With Todd Walier strongly in our collective thoughts we all summited late morning, ate our tasty prepared Dublin School boxed lunches, and reflected upon how meaningful our climb had been as we sat atop ‘our’ mountain in dense fog and 25-35 mph wind gusts with spatterings of rain blowing in our faces. Our inside group joke with one another was just how beautiful the Monadnock view was from the peak. It was a magical moment in every way for all the right reasons!

I have climbed Mt. Monadnock dozens of times in my lifetime and The Todd Walier Memorial Hike was my most special and meaningful experience on the summit ever. Our purpose for the climb, thanks to class members from 1983, was clear from the beginning and that was to honor Todd. We did so, defiantly.

The journey embraced all that is wonderful about the people of Dublin School. The warmth, the laughter, the fun stories, the poignant moments, our shared love for our school, and our persevering through rough weather simply symbolizes what is right about Dublin.

Summiting Monadnock on Alumni Weekend with John, Tracey, Chris, and Brian will be a strong memory for a lifetime on so many profound levels and I thank them for that!

Todd, we miss you.
Mayfair 2010
Despite the rainy weather, we had another spectacular Mayfair Weekend! Thank you to all the students who played courageously on the athletic fields and performed beautifully for the outdoor rock concert and dance performance. You are the soul of our School!

Congratulations to the Class of 2010!

Tom Rockwell ’37

“To Whom It May Concern,

As you know, the School started in the fall of 1935 and when it came to June, 1936, there was no one in the senior class and therefore no graduates. In June of 1937, I was the only one in the senior class. Thus, when I graduated, I was the first and the oldest graduates of the Dublin School.

Following graduation, I went to Brown University, and then entered World War II as an airplane engine mechanic specializing in turbo supercharges. I served 3 1/2 years in the 5th Air Force in the Pacific Theater and was honorably discharged with the rank of corporal in 1946.

I then worked for a year in the American Woolen Company in Shawsheen, MA and then transferred to The Davis & Furber Machine Company in North Andover, MA where I was trained to be a carding machine erector and I installed textile machinery in about 60 mills in the eastern half of Canada and the eastern half of the United States. Following this I worked in their accounts receivable department for several years.

When I retired, I worked for the American Textile History Museum as a volunteer repairing their textile machinery in North Andover, MA and later when the museum moved to Lowell, MA.”

In July 2010, Tom was spotlighted in the Lowell Sun newspaper where, at 92, he still keeps the museum machines humming. As the article explains, Tom can fix virtually any kind of machinery, which is not easy considering most of the machines are over 100 years old and manufacturers don’t sell parts for antique machines anymore. “If you need a part, you have to make something that will work. You make a cast iron or steel tool yourself to fix a particular job,” explains Tom in the article.

Numismatics, or the study of coins, is another subject Tom has been interested in his whole life. He has gone to countless coin and currency meetings over many years and in 1974 Tom authored a two-part treatise in The Numismatist entitled Dating Systems on Coins since 1000 A.D. The article earned him a first-place Heath Literary Award. He has also been recognized by the American Numismatic Association Presidential Award (1996) and Glenn Smedley Memorial Award (2004), and in 2008 he was named a Numismatic Ambassador by Numismatic News.

A loyal supporter of Dublin School, Tom finishes his letter to us by saying, “Now that I am winding down my career, I am aiming for 2012 A.D. for my 75th reunion. And being of good health now, I am planning to attend.”
On November 4, 2010 the Alumni Office received word that Dublin School former faculty member Charles Latham Jr., 93, died on October 31, 2010. Charles taught history, English, Latin, and French at Dublin from 1946 to 1956. He was dormitory master in Sleepy Hollow, ran the library, and helped coach soccer. He directed plays, including two Gilbert and Sullivan operettas, helped with the Glee Club, and provided a Dublin choir for All Saints Church in Peterborough.

Born in Indianapolis, he graduated from Princeton, and earned a Master’s degree in history from Harvard. After leaving Dublin, he taught for two years in Denver, then moved to The Episcopal Academy in Philadelphia where he taught for 24 years. Since 1969 Charles has been president of the historical society for his beloved Thetford, Vermont, the site of his family home. Serving as the archivist, librarian and editor/author of several books on Thetford history, at 92 years of age, Charles was honored by the town as “Citizen of the Year.”

In 1987, Charles returned to Dublin School in order to write Dublin School: A New Beginning, 1970 – 1985, a valuable book describing an important transition period in the School’s history. A loyal supporter of the School and member of the Lehmann Legacy Society, Charles was a true friend to Dublin in every sense of the word.

In 2008 Dublin School alumni Nathaniel “Buddy” Bates ’53 and Bill King ’52, roommates in Sleepy Hollow, created the Dublin School Charles Latham Distinguished Teacher Award for his encouragement in helping students to realize their potential, and his dedication to a well-rounded curriculum that included sports, music and theater. The award honors an outstanding faculty member each year, but this year, the award will seem bittersweet as we say goodbye to this amazing educator and loyal friend.

A memorial service will be held in Hanover, NH on January 16, 2011. Please do not hesitate to contact Erika Rogers in the alumni office at 603-563-1230 or erogers@dublinschool.org if you have any further questions or would like to share a memory you have of Charles for the Dubliner.
Envisioning a World of Possibilities

On October 2, 2010 Dublin School celebrated its 75th Anniversary with a golf tournament at the beautiful Dublin Lake Club golf course.

We were honored to have such a great group of alumni, students, parents, faculty and friends come out for the day. We would like to say a special “Thank You” to trustee and former faculty member Suzie Vogel for hosting a reception at her home after the tournament.

Remembering Mike

On November 13, 2010 Dublin School was honored to host the memorial service for Mike Walter ’86. Over 75 people attended this very touching service including many Dublin School alumni and former faculty members. The Walter family has asked that memorial gifts be given to Dublin School in Mike’s memory. The use of these funds is still to be determined and will be shared at a later date.

Our Mission

At Dublin School, we strive to awaken a curiosity for knowledge and a passion for learning. We instill the values of discipline and meaningful work that are necessary for the good of self and community. We respect the individual learning style and unique potential each student brings to our School. With our guidance, Dublin students become men and women who seek truth and act with courage.
