

SHANNON HUFFMAN POLSON
Author. Speaker. Adventurer. Veteran.
www.aborderlife.com

Polson Author Bio

Shannon Huffman Polson is an author, speaker, adventurer and veteran. Her first book is North of Hope: A Daughter's Arctic Journey (Harper Collins 2013), and her second is The Way the Wild Gets Inside: Field Notes from Alaska (2015). Her essay "Naked" won honorable mention in the 2015 VanderMey Nonfiction Prize, and other work has been published in River Teeth Journal, Ruminate Magazine, High Country News and others, including two anthologies. Polson works as Artist-in-Residence with Methow Arts supporting the literary arts in Okanagan County schools and is a member of Seattle7 Writers supporting literacy in King County. She has been a featured presenter at literary festivals across the country, and taught at Hugo House Seattle and as visiting faculty for the Whidbey Writers MFA. Polson holds an AB in English Literature from Duke University, an MBA from the Tuck School at Dartmouth and an MFA in Creative Writing from Seattle Pacific University. She lives in northeast Washington with her family.