Background

Dr. Ainslie's work centers on analyzing the social structures that either bring communities together or pull them apart. A trained psychologist, he has worked in communities in Mexico and the U.S. struggling with racial conflict, social change, and violence. His unique ability to develop rapport with individuals and communities in stressful times has produced an insightful body of work exploring the experience and impact of immigration, racial and ethnic tensions including hate crimes, communities traumatized by violence, and veteran's issues. This knowledge fuels his talks, which can be tailored to your organization's interests and current events. A complete bibliography is on the reverse.

Dr. Ainslie's Speaker Fee is $3,000 plus expenses.

Feedback on recent presentations

We brought Ricardo Ainslie to Springfield, IL for two lectures in the space of a few years. In both cases he spoke to a packed house of WACCI members and university students. He is a fine speaker, and his research on the impact of the cartel on the border city of Juarez was enhanced by the remarkable pictures he had taken.... I highly recommend him as a speaker for any group interested in this important issue, as well as the important US-Mexico relationship.

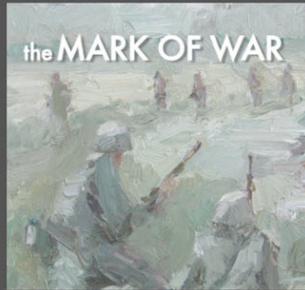

Dr. Stephen J. Schwark, Professor Emeritus of Political Science & Global Studies, Univ. of Illinois-Springfield

Ricardo Ainslie is an exceptional speaker with a gift for delivering complicated subject matter in a way the audience can understand. He spoke about Mexico's drug war at a company sales conference we held in Austin. His talk delivered on the promise to engage the audience in a way that provided fresh insights. His descriptions were compelling and heartfelt. No one left the room removed from the relevance of the situations in Mexico for us in the U.S.
