The Whatcom Dispute Resolution Center was established in 1992 as a 501 (c)3 nonprofit organization, operating in the ancestral homelands of the Coast Salish Peoples. These waterways, shorelines, valleys, and mountains have been the traditional homelands of the Lummi, Nooksack, Semiahmoo and Samish peoples from time immemorial. As we collectively work to actualize our mission and vision, we will strive to reduce inequalities by promoting and reinforcing the strengths and resilience of all people.

Our goals reflect where we want to dedicate our energy in the coming years - serving our community well, deepening our connections, and ensuring we have ample capacity to fulfill our mission. Through this plan we are committing to wise and meaningful growth, anchored in these beliefs:

- People are capable of navigating conflict in healthy and constructive ways.
- People need to have equal access to impartial spaces, structures, and services for conflict resolution that maximizes self-determination, access to justice, and dignity.
- People are interconnected. We recognize our work exists within the broader societal realities of systemic inequities and marginalization.
- Our community is diverse. We recognize strong relationships and partnerships inform our work, and help us advance our collective vision.
- Our work asks us to create a sense of belonging for all as we consider people’s perspectives and interests.
- Our work requires kindness, energy, and investment in the well-being of our staff and volunteers.
- Our work takes time and resources to do well, and we must pace our growth to sustain quality services.
- Becoming an equitable organization is ongoing, iterative, and essential in fulfilling our mission.

OUR PROCESS:

The Board and staff engaged in a collaborative process to reflect upon past goals and accomplishments, current and future needs, organizational values, and the changing landscape of our community. Through a combination of discussion and reflection, stakeholder interviews, and a community survey, we identified three key areas of focus - equity, quality, and sustainability, which are reflected throughout our updated values and within our newly established strategic goals and objectives.
