

Costa Rican pianist, Jorge Briceño, has participated in several solo recitals in venues such as Costa Rica's National Auditorium and National Theater, Eugene O'Neill Theatre and the Ruben Dario National Theatre in Nicaragua. Among his professors are Rigoberto Tablada, Higinio Fernández, Leonardo Gell, Manuel Matarrita and Jason Kwak. Mr. Briceño holds a Bachelor's degree from the University of Costa Rica and a Master's degree from Texas State University. He has participated in lessons and masterclasses with renowned professors such as Marina Lomazov (University of South Carolina), Enrico Elisi (University of Toronto), Anton Nel (University of Texas), Albert Tiu (Yong Siew Toh Conservatory of Music), Antonio Pompa-Baldi (Cleveland Institute of Music), and Gabriela Montero. In 2013, Mr. Briceño was a laureate in the VII Maria Clara Cullell International Piano Competition. Currently, he is a second-year Doctoral Student and a Promising Scholar Award recipient at the University of Oregon, where he studies with Dr. Alexandre Dossin.