Eight conducting fellows from across the U.S. and Canada have been selected by the Carnegie Hall Choral Institute and the Young People's Chorus of New York City to take part in the Transient Glory Symposium, led by 2011 MacArthur Fellow and symposium artistic director Francisco J. Núñez, which from February 15 to 18, will provide three days of intensive training workshops and performances of new music commissioned for young voices for the Transient Glory series.

Transient Glory was created in 2001 by Mr. Núñez to spotlight the children's chorus as a serious and glorious instrument during that fleeting period of time when a child's voice imbues music with a particular poignancy and innocence and to demonstrate that young performers are capable of music-making of the highest quality.

The Carnegie Hall Institute is a program of the Weill Music Institute designed for choral teachers that annually offers a series of workshops and concerts, each aimed at introducing participants to different approaches to preparing and conducting music for chorus. The Transient Glory Symposium will enable participating conducting fellows, associates, and auditors to communicate and demonstrate to their students and audiences back home that new music can be approachable and accessible, especially to young people.

The eight conducting fellows will work one-on-one with composers Derek Bermel, John Corigliano, Douglas J. Cuomo, David Del Tredici, Paquito D'Rivera, Michael Gordon, Bright Sheng, and Joan Tower; artists-in-residents the JACK Quartet and the Young People's Chorus of New York City; Francisco Núñez; and Guest Conductors Grant Gershon, Music Director of the Los Angeles Master Chorale; Professor of Music at Ithaca College Janet Galván; and Artistic Director/Founder of VocalEssence Philip Brunelle in three days of workshop activities in score analysis, technique, and rehearsals leading up to evening concerts at Le Poisson Rouge (February 16), the 92nd Street Y (February 17), and Zankel Hall (February 18).

Hosted by WNYC's John Schaefer, each concert will be a festival in itself, including mini-concerts within the whole. Every Transient Glory composition will be followed by a related chamber work, as well as the world premiere of a one- to two-minute choral work written for the occasion by each composer. In addition, Mr. Schaefer will interview each composer about his or her musical decisions and thinking.
