HEADLANDS HANDMADE

I am a landscape architect by day and a leather craftsman by night. My profession keeps my design eye open, sketch hand busy and mind focused. I enjoy the combination of the two disciplines and find each one constantly influencing the other. Some of the landscape projects I work on can take years to complete, I turned to leather craft as a way to satisfy a more immediate desire to make. Thus in late 2012, Headlands Handmade was born.

Headlands Handmade combines a passion for craftsmanship with good design, durability and pride of place to make high quality leather goods. Each items is carefully cut, punched, stitched and burnished by hand.

THE CLAY CUP

While searching for my car in a huge parking lot in Irvine one afternoon, I fortuitously stumbled upon this clay cup. The cup was nestled under a palm tree with a folded piece of paper that read, "Finders Keepers." The inside read, "You just found a handmade piece, take it home and enjoy." I never discovered who left this tiny cup, but whoever it was, I owe them a debt of gratitude. That discovery set me on my path to making handmade pieces. Look for one in a random parking lot near you.

THE HIDE DROGHER

Headlands Handmade honors the history of the Dana Point Headlands. Atop the seaside cliff stands a bronze statue, The Hide Drogher. The statue tells the story of the days when the bluff was used to expedite the transport of hides to waiting ships below.
