

2017 IGLI SUMMER INSTITUTE

CALL FOR NOMINATIONS

The Inclusive Global Leadership Initiative (IGLI) is pleased to invite nominations for our inaugural Summer Institute, to be held August 27-30, 2017, at the Josef Korbel School of International Studies at the University of Denver. The 2017 Summer Institute will convene 12 leading women activists from the front lines of movements to advance peace, security, and human rights across the world. The Institute will offer these activists opportunities for training, networking, and learning on how to wage effective nonviolent civil resistance campaigns in their home communities. Throughout the three-day Institute, participants will take part in a variety of sessions, including on how women can strengthen their role as leaders in movements for social change. Activists will have the chance interact with other participants, University of Denver faculty, students, and members of the broader Denver community. Participants will also receive advanced materials for their use from some of the world's leading experts on nonviolent civil resistance campaigns.

We are seeking nominations for 2017 Institute participants. To be eligible, women must be currently involved in community organizing, civil resistance efforts, or other grassroots work around issues related to peace, security, and human rights (broadly conceived). We welcome self-nominations. Candidates should have experience with and an interest in learning about nonviolent strategies to affect change. They must be conversant in English and able to travel to Denver, Colorado to attend the entirety of the Institute.

IGLI, a project of the Sié Chéou-Kang Center for International Security and Diplomacy at the Josef Korbel School, will cover all costs associated with travel and lodging for the selected participants. Support for obtaining a visa, in addition to reasonable visa expenses (if required), will also be provided.

Nominations are due May 5, 2017 at 5:00 p.m. MST, and can be made electronically using this form. Please direct any questions to Sie.Center@du.edu. More information at www.du.edu/korbel/sie/research/igli.html.
