

THE LOOK / THE REPORT

To give a rather austere London town house a youthful edge, New York City- and London-based designer Rebekah Caudwell cranked up the color by bringing in Jonathan Adler aquamarine velvet sofas and a red cabinet from Sabina Danenberg Atelier; the curtains are Peter Frey's Mauritius linen. "I wanted the look to be joyous and energetic—more Pale Springs than bookish Bloomsbury," she says.

A vibrant sitting room featuring a bright blue tufted sofa, a patterned rug, and a colorful table. The room is decorated with a bright blue tufted sofa, a patterned rug, and a colorful table. The room is decorated with a bright blue tufted sofa, a patterned rug, and a colorful table. The room is decorated with a bright blue tufted sofa, a patterned rug, and a colorful table.

THE Report

AN IN-DEPTH LOOK AT THE LATEST TIPS, TRICKS AND TRENDS TO BRIGHTEN UP YOUR HOME.

WRITTEN BY MICHELLE BRUNNER

TECHNICOLOR VISION

With the arrival of spring comes a riot of color. Consider the brilliant yellow of daffodils or the bluish-purple of hyacinths bursting forth from the ground. But why should Mother Nature have all the fun? This period of rebirth and renewal is the perfect time to rethink color inside the home. For the last few seasons, white walls have dominated the design space, but tastemakers are now slowly turning to saturated hues and bold brights that command attention, as in the vibrant and cheery sitting room shown here. "Your home affects your mood, so why not make it a happy place?" says the room's designer, Rebekah Caudwell. Over the next few pages, come along with us for a lively romp through the many colors on the spectrum.