

What is the five-session, Women in Leadership Forum?

In this next five-session group, participants will get to know each other, explore ideas around leadership and what it means to be a woman leader in their workplace. They will share their challenges and also what's important to them. Together they will open up new ways of thinking, and experiment with ways of being leaders, so that they create a style of leading that works for them. Women will find that they already have capabilities that are just waiting to be invited into an authentic leadership identity.

What to Expect

The five sessions will work through topics related to women in leadership. For example:

- Beliefs about leadership (including unconscious bias and the imposter syndrome);
- Awareness of self, of one's values, of what's important;
- Boundaries – knowing what we want, what we don't want
- Acting and speaking in what we want and don't want

WiLF is devoted to developing 'Personal Power', defined as:

- freedom and flexibility of choice in thinking, feeling and behaviour (self-leadership);
- the power to engage others' thinking, feeling and behaviour from their place of self (leading others) as opposed to leveraging positional power (control).

I can't praise WiLF more highly. I felt I have found my "tribe" of diverse thinking, respectful and inspiring women to support my leadership journey. I look forward to each session and always come away with a tactical take-away to implement or reflect on.

(I liked) the networking, the frankness of conversations shared, the learnings that are able to be applied daily, and mechanisms to remind yourself of how to be a better Leader.
