Let's talk Rosé

There are many stages in making a good Rosé.
Firstly, red wine grapes are collected, sorted, and the grape bunches destemmed. The juice ferments with the skins for a short period of time and before wine becomes deep red, it is separated from the skins. After the fermentation is complete, the wine is kept cool in storage tanks to settle and stabilize for a short period of time. Then the wines are clarified, bottled, and shipped.
Next - drinking time!
