Lisa Blas is a visual artist of Guamanian/Italian-American descent working in painting, photography, collage, and installation. Based in New York, she draws from art history, nature, and current events to reflect on specific cultural and political legacies, past and present. She has taught across disciplines in Fine Art and Art History at undergraduate and graduate levels, with a special focus on museum and historical archives. Blas has exhibited nationally and internationally, while living and working in Los Angeles, Washington, DC, Lille, France and Brussels, Belgium during the years of 2001 - 2012. Forthcoming, Blas has produced an artist project for the Winter issue of Public Art Dialogue, due out in February/March 2016.
