With one week to go until the Oscars, Rachel Marlowe reveals the last-minute treatments the A-listers are queuing up for

Photographs Schoohaia

THE BOTOX NECK LIFT
“The slick forehead is passe,” says Lisa Goodman, owner of GoodSkin Los Angeles, whose specialty is the untraced neck. “People realize now that trying to look too young just makes you look older.” Her mantra? Forget about Botox for wrinkles, instead, think of it for lift. “The face is covered in muscles — some that pull up, more that pull down,” she says. Her most-requested treatment this awards season is the Botox neck lift— the neck is an oft-neglected area that can be the first to show signs of aging. “Placement is key,” says Goodman. “The Botox is injected under the jaw near the ear to release spasms and tensions in the neck and create a longer, more elegant profile and upright appearance.”

InLA: goodskinla.com
InLondon: DrDanielSister, from £250

THE FACIAL SCRAPE
Industry insiders flock to veteran Hollywood facialist Heather Bradley for her Signature Scape, a two-hour treatment during which she gently shaves off dead skin, fine “peach fuzz” hair and what she likes to call “bubbles” from the face, neck and décolleté. “It’s completely, painless, non-invasive, healthy trauma,” Bradley reassures us. “It’s actually incredibly relaxing — a lot of clients fall asleep during the treatment and it brings natural collagen production by increasing healthy cellular turnover, and leaves the skin looking really youthful.” The treatment is done on clean, dry skin and results in an instantly smoother skin texture and tone while the long-term effects include the reduced appearance of fine lines and a significant reduction in acne scarring.

InLA: BradleyBeauty.com
In London: DrDavidJack, from £150

THE INFRARED BODY WRAP
The secret to not sweating it on the red carpet? Turn up the heat with Cynthia Franco’s signature Head to Toe Glow treatment, during which clients are cooconed in a full infrared body wrap for a 50-minute sweat session — the wrap wraps snugly heats up to about 95°C — while Franco administers a bespoke facial. “Far infrared heat deeply detoxifies the skin; the body’s largest organ,” says Franco. “The treatment improves circulation, oxygenates the blood and boosts collagen production. Regular sessions also raise the metabolism, so you burn calories even when you are not on the treatment table — the American Medical Association concluded that a 30-minute infrared sauna session can burn about 600 calories — meaning that, on the big day, my clients find that they fit nicely into that red-carpet dress.” Salma Hayek and Amber Heard are fans.

InLA: cynmarietherapy.com
InLondon: PHIL Clinic, from £650

THE SKIN FIX
When it comes to flawless head-to-toe, red-carpet ready skin, former actress and stuntwoman Gina Mari has it covered. “Always ask my clients what they are going to be wearing,” says Mari. “We take the gown into consideration and make sure that every inch of skin on display is smooth, even and toned.” Mari’s comprehensive Birthday Suit service involves an arsenal of treatments, starting with full body, dry, diamond microdermabrasion to slough off dead skin, followed by a full body lactic-acid wash (read: peel) and a round of brightening, vitamin C-infused microdermabrasion. “This really helps to brighten up dull winter skin and get rid of any discolorations on the elbows and knees,” she says. Mari then contours the body using radio frequency and ultrasound therapy to tighten the skin on the upper arms and knees, before sending clients back under the lights for a final facial. “I always ask my clients what they are wearing, and let’s make them look great for that.”

InLA: goodskinla.com
InLondon: DrDanielSister, from £250

MINI FAT FREEZING
The hottest fat-freezing treatment on the market has finally been given a makeover of its own. Coolsculpting, a non-surgical body-contouring procedure that uses cryolipolysis technology to freeze away fat cells, is now available in Petite. This means it can target smaller areas, such as the flesh on the back of the arms. “It’s liposuction with zero downtime,” says DrGlenn Vallecillos of DMH Aesthetics, who recommends a course of two to three sessions, six weeks apart, for optimum results. During this painless, non-surgical procedure, areas of fat are sucked into a handheld, vacuum-like device and cooled to -5°C, at which temperature the fat cells are destroyed without damaging surrounding tissue. “The satisfaction rate is close to 100%, because it hits those areas that are really resistant to diet and exercise and can be done on much slimmer body types,” he says.

InLA: drvallecillos.com
InLondon: PHIL Clinic, from £650

THE LADOR TONER
“The one thing everyone can benefit from is laser toning,” says A-list dermatologist Dr David Colbert, who regularly jets from coast to coast throughout the year to administer his cult Triad Facial for the face, hands and even feet on the looks of Sienna Miller and Naomi Watts. “It makes the complexion pop and really improves skin quality.” Colbert recently teamed up with The Wellness Clinic at Harrods to offer the treatment, which includes microdermabrasion to remove dead skin, followed by several passes with a YAG laser, which emits 1,000 light pulses a minute to stimulate collagen and increase skin firmness, and a chemical peel to deliver instant tightness, brightness and luminescence. “On the red carpet my clients want to glow,” he says. “Laser immediately delivers a smoother, tighter, more lifted look for the face.”

InLA: colbertmd.com
InLondon: TheWellnessClinic, Harrods, from £800

THE SUPER FACIAL
Hollywood’s hardest-working actresses — Alison Brie and Michelle Monaghan among them — have facialist Biba de Sousa’s number on speed dial, thanks to her reputation as the go-to liss when it comes to burnouts and breakouts caused by early call times and heavy on-set make-up. “My clients are running around like crazy during awards season,” says de Sousa, who treated Brie to a three-hour service before the Golden Globes. “They come in tired and want to leave looking rested and rejuvenated.” De Sousa’s red-carpet weapon of choice is a next-generation, three-in-one machine called OxyGeneo, which exfoliates, delivers a custom infusion of active ingredients onto the skin and then oxygenates using CO2 bubbles that get blasted on the skin surface, creating a physiological response that sends oxygen-rich blood to the area. “You walk out looking bright-eyed and emanating wellness,” she promises.

InLA: estheunderground.com
InLondon: InAesthetic, from £195

InLA: ginamari.com
InLondon: HeatherClinic, from £550

InLA: thewellnessclinic.com
InLondon: Harrods, from £800

The Sunday Times Style 51

Style Oscars

“Every day one thing everyone can benefit from is laser toning,” says A-list dermatologist DrDavidColbert, who regularly jets from coast to coast throughout the year to administer his cult Triad Facial for the face, hands and even feet on the looks of Sienna Miller and Naomi Watts. “It makes the complexion pop and really improves skin quality.” Colbert recently teamed up with The Wellness Clinic at Harrods to offer the treatment, which includes microdermabrasion to remove dead skin, followed by several passes with a YAG laser, which emits 1,000 light pulses a minute to stimulate collagen and increase skin firmness, and a chemical peel to deliver instant tightness, brightness and luminescence. “On the red carpet my clients want to glow,” he says. “Laser immediately delivers a smoother, tighter, more lifted look for the face.”

InLA: colbertmd.com
InLondon: TheWellnessClinic, Harrods, from £800