FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

MOSIER PHOTOGRAPHER TAKES PART IN HISTORIC STATEWIDE PROJECT

July 8, 2013 – On July 15, 2013, Mosier photographer John Maher will participate in the Oregon Project Dayshoot 30th Anniversary event by documenting life in Mosier, Oregon. Maher took part in the first Project Dayshoot by photographing the small neighborhood of Bonny Slope in Washington County. This year, he plans to come full circle by photographing small town life in Mosier, his home for the last 13 years.

“I want to show the community of people that make Mosier what it is,” Maher said. “By showing the diversity and individuality of our smaller communities, I hope we can increase our feeling of inter-connection that will show we are, as Oregonians, all part of a much bigger community.”

Maher is taking part in a historic statewide project that will take place from midnight to midnight on July 15. More than 100 photographers and videographers will collect images that show a “day in the life” of Oregon which will be displayed online and in a physical exhibit, and will become part of the permanent collection of the Oregon Historical Society.

The public is also encouraged to participate on July 15 by posting photos to Flickr, Instagram, or Facebook using the tag #dayshoot30.

ABOUT THE OREGON PROJECT DAYSHOOT 30TH ANNIVERSARY EVENT

On July 15, 2013, photographers and videographers from around Oregon, in partnership with the Oregon Historical Society, will participate in a 24-hour project to capture a single day’s worth of images across the state. This historical event will take place 30 years to the day after the original Project Dayshoot, in which 92 Oregon photographers collected thousands of photographs. This year’s event will include many of the same photographers who participated in the original project.
