Landscape design for this corporate project had an interesting twist: how does one balance the prerequisite “corporate” look of tidy landscape around a new building with a wild meadow of native grasses and forbs that provide a more natural habitat for local flora and fauna? This was the Nestle Company’s goal for its new Research & Development Center.

Behnke utilized its 50+ years of local plant and climate knowledge to meet Nestle’s goal, and to help Nestle win a Cleveland Engineering Society Award of Excellence for the overall project.
