Teen Writers Take the Stage
Stories Come Alive at 12th Annual WriteGirl Performance Workshop

LOS ANGELES — After a year of transforming their thoughts into words on paper, this Saturday, WriteGirl teens will learn how to give those words a voice. With the help of several guest performers, including poet and Da’ Poetry Lounge Host Natalie Patterson, the girls will learn and rehearse performance techniques.

WriteGirl is excited to be partnering with the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences to present this workshop at the Academy Lab in Hollywood, where there is ample space to accommodate the more than 80 girls and women who will be attending this special event. Fox is a key sponsor of the event, and a longtime supporter of WriteGirl programs.

WriteGirl teens have practiced many forms of creative writing throughout the year, including poetry, screenwriting, fiction and songwriting. This performance workshop helps bring their stories to life. The girls will watch clips of outstanding performers, practice pre-show warm-ups, and learn specific presentation techniques for small and large audiences.

"The WriteGirl Performance Workshop is a high energy, on your feet afternoon, where girls are coached by professional speakers and actors to throw aside their 'inside voice' and let their voices roar to the rafters. It's non-threatening, it's fun, and every girl leaves the day a much more confident public speaker," says Clare Sera, screenwriter and founding WriteGirl volunteer.

This past fall, WriteGirl teens headed to Harvard, CSU Fullerton, UCLA, University of Wisconsin—Madison, Grinnell, Macalester, Azusa Pacific University, and CSU Channel Islands, just to name a few.

More than 350 girls participate in WriteGirl annually — an enormous increase from WriteGirl’s initial group of 30 at its inception in 2001. Over the past decade, WriteGirl’s success can be measured by the achievements of its alumnae who continue to study, work and contribute their unique voices around the world.
