WriteGirl presents over 50 creative writing workshops and events each year. One of the most highly-anticipated events is the annual WriteGirl Songwriting Workshop.

The annual event gives girls tools and guidance for writing song lyrics through small group writing activities, panel discussions and live performances. Girls learn about song themes, structure, "the hook," rhyme, repetition and more. GRAMMY-award winning singer/songwriters will share their expertise and help coach girls throughout the event.

The workshop culminates with performances of girls' lyrics. It's an exciting spontaneous showcase, giving teens inspiration and confidence in their own creative work.

“Having a group like WriteGirl is an amazing help to those who love the craft. It mentoring of the young girls is a wonderful way to pair the professional with new writers to show them how to hone their skills and have a successful career doing so.”

~ GRAMMY Award-winning songwriter Diane Warren

The challenges facing young girls in Los Angeles are enormous. WriteGirl participants come from primarily high-density schools and low-income neighborhoods with limited resources. Many face intense challenges, such as unstable home environments, violence, clinical depression, suicide attempts, and homelessness. 1 in 4 teen girls in California will become pregnant, and 1 in 6 teens in the LA Unified School District will never graduate.

WriteGirl is a counterbalance in the lives of its mentees, providing a sanctuary for these girls to work one-on-one with professional women writers and share their experiences, ideas and dreams through creative writing.

WriteGirl is about transformation. When girls are given the space, time and support to be themselves and say what they feel, surrounded by creative and caring mentors, they excel and their confidence soars. WriteGirl fosters creativity, critical thinking, communication skills, and unbridled boldness through monthly workshops, public readings, mentorship, and publications.

For 21 years, WriteGirl has guided 100% of seniors in the Core Mentoring Program to graduate from high school and enroll in college, many as the first in their families to do so. WriteGirl alumnae who may have once believed college was out of reach, are now succeeding academically and professionally all over the world.
