

What DO YOU Say?

Preparation and Review for Beyond Daily Expressions

Teacher's Cue Sheets

How to play

1. Play the game using one cue sheet per week.
 - ☞ There are enough cue sheets to play the game 12 times for D/E A, and 12 times for D/E B—but you may not wish to play it this many times. Stop at your discretion.
2. Before you begin, review the Daily Expressions cards as indicated at the top of the cue sheet.
3. Next, preview the “Difficult Words” on the cue sheet. Say the word in English, and have students tell you the meaning in Japanese. If they cannot, tell them the Japanese meaning. At the end of this process, review once again any words that the students did not know.
 - i. Some of these words can have more than one Japanese meaning. The Japanese printed is for the sense in which the word is used in the scenario beneath. If students give other correct meanings, don’t tell them that they’re “wrong”, but do elicit or teach the meaning we are fishing for.
4. Begin the game. Read a scenario aloud at a natural speed.
5. As in Quick Response Questions, students compete to be the first to answer—in this game, the first to say a Daily Expression that is appropriate to the scenario.
 - i. They are not to answer until you have finished reading the scenario. These always end with “What do you say?” or a similar question.
 - ii. For some scenarios, more than one Daily Expression could work. Be sure to elicit all possible “good” answers.
 - iii. Answers shown in (parentheses) are acceptable, but are not one of the Daily Expressions being covered that day. You may still give points for these.
 - iv. Answers shown in ((double parentheses)) might work, but aren’t quite ideal. For these, you may give a point, a half-point, or no points at your discretion.
6. Give points to the first to answer. If more than one answer is possible, accept and reward all such answers accordingly.
 - i. If none of the students produces a given answer, give it yourself. Hopefully, you will see light bulbs going on over the kids’ heads.
 - ii. One option at this time is to ask the kids, “What else might you say?” and encourage creative answers that are not from Daily Expressions. If you do this, keep an eye on the clock so as not to allow this exercise to take too long.
7. Before moving on to the next scenario on the list, scan the room for signs of incomprehension or confusion. As needed, explain the scenario, or read it again more slowly. Do not assume that, just because one has answered, all others have understood.
8. At the end, time permitting, review any scenarios for which no one was able to answer.
9. Finally, tally points and declare winners!
