WORKSHOPS

SESSION 1: 1:00-2:30

SESSION 2: 2:45-3:45

4635. Aimee Suzara | Writing From the Body

How can we generate writing not from our minds, but from our bodies? This writing & performance workshop will allow you to explore how to begin with the body, as well as address attitudes about the body. Develop gesture and text through guided writing, theater and movement exercises and create a short piece to share at the end.

2320. Dr. Tianna Paschel | Beyond Black or Latino: Bridges through Afro-Latino History

This workshop will focus on the African American and Latino Historical Connection through a review of literature, documentaries and biographies. This workshop is great for teachers who are interested in building positive cross-cultural connections between African-American and Latino communities.

5634. Tiffani Johnson | Reading Against the Canon: Students' Sociocultural Positioning as a Springboard for Deepening Literacy

We will explore the liberatory potential of harnessing adolescent students' inclination to question, critique and analyze texts in transformative ways. Using examples from research and classroom practice, teachers will leave with ideas for reading canonical texts against the grain in productive ways. Note: laptop, tablet or smartphone required.

5527. Alicia Dorosin | Through the Lens of a Historian: Islam Beyond Terrorism

Acquire tools for navigating controversial claims about the relationship between Islam and violence, gender, and American foreign policy. Investigate source materials that will expand your students' appreciation of the diversity of Muslim societies and cultures, and develop ways to integrate the study of Islam into your curriculum.

2320. Dr. Lanette Jimerson | Access-only is Problematic: Moving Beyond Complex Texts in AP Courses

When considering what it takes to thrive in AP courses, how often do we turn to a variety of texts based on depth and breadth? But what if the students AP success goes beyond written texts to something even more tangible? This workshop will share the social experiences, including field trips, museum and hands on explorations that also enhance students' grasp of literary content and promote equity at a much deeper level. We will also discuss ways to gain funding for these resources for our students.

5527. Portia Carryer | Podcasting for Community Engagement

Eager to maximize your class set of Chromebooks? Want to know how to lead students to create compelling digital compositions even though you may not have a lot of resources? Ms. Carryer, a second-year teacher at Oakland Technical High School, will share her classroom units on using podcasts to bridge history and English standards. Participants will leave with concrete technology tools and lesson examples that can be adapted for their own practice.
