Course innovations at San Francisco State University

AMD 262 Fashion Illustration

- Incorporated Photoshop and Illustrator lectures and assignments into course, which was absent in the design curriculum (technical sketches; digital moodboards; color; prints; presentation layouts)
- Partnered with Ruraq Maki, a non-profit organization based in SF that creates economic opportunities for low income female artisans working with traditional crafts in Peru and Bolivia. The students designed products for the U.S. market with design direction from Ruraq Maki founder. Then, I worked with students in independent studies to develop prototypes for production. Examples can be found here <http://www.kellyreddy-best.com/work/#/ruraq-maki/>.
- Created end of semester exhibit of student work as part of final student project, which lasted for 1-2 weeks.
- Created drawing technique videos and shared via youtube.
- Added lecture and assignments on “how to do a successful design critique.”

AMD 362 Apparel Design II: Draping

- Incorporated fit and fitting techniques into course and course assignments, both fitting to the dress form and to a human body.
- Added demonstrations and assignments on draping and sewing with knits.
- Added assignment and demonstration on understructure techniques for strapless garments

AMD 560 Textiles and Apparel in the World Marketplace

- Added readings and assignments using Sourcing Journal Online in order to engage students with current and relevant industry issues and developments.
- Invited between 4-5 guest industry speakers from the bay area to discuss topics related to sourcing, importing, or exporting.

AMD 261 Apparel Construction

- Developed lectures, samples, and assignments on sewing with knits
- Created sample library for each kind of seam, seam finish, closure, pocket, and other sewing techniques learned in the course and displayed on wall for students to reference throughout entire program. Many of these samples were multi-step demonstration examples (ex: welt pocket).
- Created sample demonstration videos and shared via youtube

ADM 661/761 Apparel Design Problems

- The senior collection was created in this course. In collaboration with the Visual Merchandising course, my students created lines that were then shown at the San Francisco Design Center in a culminating runway show.

- Added a critique session by outside reviewers at two stages: (1) before construction began with design ideas, target market, inspiration, color pallet, and fabric swatches and (2) once lines were constructed
- Added assignment for students to create portfolio-ready pages of senior collection including styled photographs of their lines. Portfolio pages were displayed in exhibit.
