Classic Atari arcade games now available online

November 28th, 2009 11:58 am PT

In yet another move demonstrating the legendary publisher to make itself relevant on the Interactive landscape in the eyes of fickle, next gen gamers, Atari has just released browser-based versions of six of its most popular classics. The six are Battlezone, Asteroids, Crystal Castles, Lunar Lander Adventure and Yar's Revenge. If that weren't good enough news for nostalgic fans of these retro video games gems, the fact they are to free-to-play is sure to increase web hits to its redesigned website by leaps and bounds. Even better, the games are playable on both PCs and Mac platforms. Visitors to the website will also find the latest news on plans for some of the long-time publisher's more recent favorites, Champions Online and Ghostbusters—as well Cryptic Studio's highly-anticipated MMO, Star Trek Online.
