HERB CAEN
It’s News to Me

Memos to Myself:

Halperin is showing a flapper of interest in film-making in the history of his character, Julian da Silva, the cock with which the story of A. P. Giannini’s, the banking behemoth—which is why his portrait, Julian da Silva, hopped around yesterday in a morning coat and waistcoat of the W. A. W. and three major studios want him as a star. The Staats City Bank, which is now in the midst of a major expansion, will use him for a star in their campaign.

Lapham Fires
Another Blast
At Critics

City Salaries
Board Urges $15,000 for Dr. Geiger; Amendments to Pay Plan Criticized

City salaries, which have been rising steadily for the past 10 years, have been under attack once again by the City Council, particularly by the Finance Committee. The Council, in its first meeting of the year, voted to reduce the salaries of the City’s top officials, including the City Manager, the City Attorney, and the City Treasurer. The reduction, which was recommended by the Council’s Finance Committee, was based on the argument that the City should be able to save money by reducing the salaries of its top officials.

This is the second time in recent years that the Council has voted to reduce the salaries of the City’s top officials. The first time was in 1962, when the Council voted to reduce the salaries of the City Manager, the City Attorney, and the City Treasurer.

The reduction of the City’s top officials’ salaries has been a controversial issue in recent years. Many members of the public and some City officials have argued that the City should be able to save money by reducing the salaries of its top officials.

In response to the Council’s vote to reduce the salaries of the City’s top officials, the City Manager, the City Attorney, and the City Treasurer have argued that the reduction is unfair and will hurt the City’s ability to attract and retain top officials.

S. F. Business
Set a Record
In January

The City of San Francisco set a record for business in January, with sales of $2,545,000,000. This is the highest January sales figure in the City’s history, surpassing the previous record of $2,400,000,000 set in January 1962.

The record sales were due to a combination of factors, including the City’s economic growth, the increase in the City’s population, and the increase in the City’s tax base.

In addition to the City’s record sales, the City also set a record for business in February, with sales of $2,490,000,000. This is the highest February sales figure in the City’s history, surpassing the previous record of $2,350,000,000 set in February 1962.

City of Paris

The City of Paris presents
the short dress
for a long evening

...from five o'clock to... wobble, bone-shoulder shaker with black, pure silk shantung, with cover-up shawl, as shown in

THE GOWN SALON, THIRD FLOOR