

SAY YOU WILL

Written by Jess Ray

© 2017 JESS RAY MUSIC

Years are short and days are long
I would have never thought that on the fifth year, we would be here
The moment when this all began, I left who I was for who I am
And would never go back again

Thread of joy through needles of disappointment, woven in but if i could go back and I had the choice and I had the chance,
I wouldn't change it, or trade it in.

I am like the shifting sand, the tides that roll out and in I'm fickle and foolish.
But you are my giving tree, with roots a million miles beneath,
Secure and steady

One step i'm strong the next I'm weak
One step in faith, the next unbelief
But you, you are divine, endlessly kind and never surprised by me

Will you return what was stolen? Say you will, say you will Will you not come and revive us again? Say you will, say you will Will we reap what we have sewn in tears? Say we will, say we will Will you restored the wasted years? You will, Say you will.