For the last 20 years Ann has worked as a strategic advisor, executive coach, facilitator, leader in the private, public and non-profit sectors at the director level and above. Clients say Ann's strongest ability is to work at the strategic level with executives in an effort to maximize leadership talent. She's able to rapidly create a space for trusted, candid conversation and quickly brings simplicity to complex challenges.

Ann is credentialed by the International Coach Federation and holds an MA from the Leadership Institute of Seattle in Applied Behavioral Science with emphasis in Consulting and Coaching in Organizations. Her undergraduate degree is in Visual Communications and Political Science from the Evergreen State College.

Ann spends her time coaching, facilitating and managing around the globe. Her international work has taken place in Malaysia, China, Canada, Argentina and United Arab Emirates. She has the honor of working with leaders in Fortune 500 companies, some of which are award winning companies for their distinguished leadership development programs.

Ann also has a breadth of experience consulting and managing internally. She's been CEO of her own leadership development company for the last 8 years, 2 years as an internal OD consultant, 1 year as a Director of public radio, 5 years as a vendor accounts manager, and 6 years as senior manager of communication services, staff, facilities and operations.

Ann is also a member of SAG, AFTRA, and EQUITY. Her earliest career resulted in over 200 credits as a producer, director, editor and performer in predominantly educational film and television. She brings her production expertise into her work through poetry, stories and metaphor.

Ann is committed to community service. She currently volunteers for The Seattle Youth Violence Prevention Initiative and for the Leadership Eastside Development Program. Ann was Chair of the Board for the Leadership Institute of Seattle where she helped lead the merger with Saybrook University.
