Holly Parker, Ph.D. (“Dr. Parker”) is a licensed clinical psychologist. The contents of this website, however, are intended for informational and educational purposes only. Dr. Parker cannot provide any individual with proper medical advice or counseling without first meeting and evaluating him or her. Accordingly, the mere use of this website by an individual does not establish a doctor/patient relationship between him or her and Dr. Parker. You rely on the information and opinions set forth on this website at your own risk, as Dr. Parker shall not be held liable for harm of any kind caused by such reliance. Further, the information and opinions on this website are not a substitute for the treatment, counseling, and other services provided by your personal mental health or other health care provider. Always seek the advice and assistance of your personal mental health or other health care provider with respect to any health care issues that you are experiencing, and never disregard such advice or assistance due to conflicting information or opinions which you read, saw, or otherwise learned about from this website.