CASE CALVERT

QUICK FACTS

AGE: 29

LOCAL TEAM: Circe City Rollers

OCCUPATION: Graphic Designer

ABOUT CASE:

While growing up in Indianapolis, Case Calvert never really wanted to play power soccer. One year, a mother of a student at Lutheran High School told Calvert “how awesome the sport was.” He didn't really get into it, so it took him over two years to even try power soccer. However, Calvert was grateful that he did as he has had “a truly successful career of winning six national championships in the last ten years, winning a World Cup in 2011, and {has} a total of eleven years of playing.”

Calvert wants to show the world that he is a world class athlete, and by doing that he “was extremely determined to make this team so that I could represent my family, my friends, my city, and anyone that deals with Duchene’s Muscular Dystrophy”, Calvert said.

Calvert works as a graphic designer and a digital marketer. He hopes “to either work for a company that impacts the lives of people with disabilities or start {his} own business dealing with fashion and disability.” In the meantime, he likes to explore. “I love to explore my city of Indianapolis through volunteering, supporting local businesses, and social gatherings. Being apart of my city is a huge aspect of my life and it is always an adventure,” says the Circle City Rollers forward.
