

The Lookout: A Weekly Guide to Shows You Won't Want to Miss

Sylvan Lionni at Kansas, through May 12 Taking as his subjects mundane objects viewed over the course of an ordinary day—actual colored laundry bags, paintings of an op-pattern shower curtain, a generic bodega sign for flowers, slightly crumpled computer print-out paper and colored, gridded printer tests—Sylvan Lionni infuses them with minimalist elegance. The paintings, produced in a variety of cool methods on materials like aluminum and Sintra, are so beautifully crafted they take your breath away, lending dignity to a world overrun by consumerist blight.
