

I'M NOT A KID ANY MORE

I'm not a kid any more.
The years go by fast.
I wish I could reverse my life,
just to be a kid again.

I can remember the days when I was a toddler.
I didn't know I'd have to graduate from college and drink eight cups of water a day and learn history about
anything that happened,
anything that happened.

*Some days, I say,
I have to grow and learn.*
But I know deep down
my heart keeps saying,

You're my kid.

Never be afraid to do anything in life.
I was nervous to sing and dance in front of people.

Never back down on your dream.
I want to be a choreographer and sing and be the next big thing.

Be serious about your education, and don't slack off.
It's not a joke. Playtime is over.

Some people might not like you, and you just have to appreciate that.
I talk loud, but I like it that way.

You're my kid.

I'm not a kid any more.
The years go by fast.

*You might not be a kid to everyone else,
but you still have to learn like a kid.
Go through the stages of being a kid.
You're my kid.*
