

Laura Husar/The New Mexican

This building, at 414 Canyon Road, is one of several honored Sunday by the Old Santa Fe

Association. Possibly the oldest house on Canyon Road, it was built in the 1700s. 9/17/20

Architectural standouts honored

By STEVE TERRELL
The New Mexican Staff

The Old Santa Fe Association on Sunday presented awards to numerous old buildings that one association official said "make Santa Fe special."

Sara Melton, vice president of the association, said the awards were given to buildings that have been maintained in their original conditions without much visible renovation or remodeling.

"They have survived with their architectural integrity intact," she said.

The awards were presented at the association's annual meeting, which was held Sunday night at the Palace of the Governors.

In addition to architecture, one downtown business was honored for being a traditional business — Lujan's Place, 218 Galisteo St. The store, owned and operated by Del Lujan, sells herbs, kitchen ware and canned Mexican food. "It hasn't changed in years," Melton said.

The architecture winners are:

GROUP FACADES (groups of buildings that present a single appearance from the street: 1) 1005, 1009 and 1015 Canyon Road. These three houses, which share a common outside wall, were built in the middle 1800s, Melton said. They are owned respectively by Bill Martin, Lee Stearns and Marie Rivera.

2) 602 and 610 Canyon Road. The latter house was built in the early 1800s, or perhaps earlier, Melton said. They are respectively owned by Doug Atwell and Willa Pallou.

3) 504, 506 and 510 Galisteo St. Built in 1912, these were homes for Santa Fe Railroad employees. They were recently restored. Owners are Gary Duncan, City Councilor Ouida MacGreggor and her husband Tom Allen.

TRADITIONAL PUEBLO STYLE: 1) 300 Garcia St built in 1839.

Owned by Michelin Stewart.

2) 401 Delgado Lane. The oldest part of the house, owned by Jane Farrar, is 200 years old.

3) 304 Delgado Street. The oldest part was built in the late 1800s. Owned by Elizabeth Thornton.

4) 1579 Canyon Road. Built in 1868, the house was renovated in the 1930s, but has remained unchanged since. Owned by Foster Hyatt.

5) 473 Camino del Monte Sol. This house, built in the 1920s, is the site of the Peters Gallery. Owned by Gerald Peters.

TERRITORIAL STYLE: 1) 1127 Paseo de Peralta, built in the 1860s. Owned by Jim Downey.

2) 733 Galisteo Street. Built before 1900. Owned by Robert Hudsteph.

3) 414 Canyon Road. Possibly the oldest house on Canyon Road, it was built as early as the 1700s, Melton said. Its brick coping was added in the late 1800s. It is owned by Ken Canfield.

4) 1201 Canyon Road. This was an old mill, built in 1836. The mill ran until 1911. It is now owned by Irene Senutovich.

5) 1216 Canyon Road. This house was built before 1860. It is owned by Joe Rivera, whose family has owned it for five generations.

PITCHED ROOF ADOBES: 1) 1520 Canyon Road. An old farm house. Belonging to Joan Buresch, the oldest rooms are 200 years old.

2) 1132 Canyon Road. This 135-year-old house was built by the grandfather of current owner Rose Abeyta.

COMMERCIAL BUILDINGS: 1) The Lamy Building, on Old Santa Fe Trail. Now used as government offices, it was formerly the old St. Michael's College built in the mid-1800s.

2) The Gross-Kelly Warehouse in the Santa Fe Railroad yards. Now owned by the Catellus Development Corp., the warehouse was built in the 1880s. It is used by a number of local businesses.

3) 208 Griffin St. This house, now law offices for the Simon and Oppenheimer firm, was recently restored.

4) 135 Grant St. Now used for offices by owner Harry Bigbee, this building served as quarters for soldiers from Fort Marcy in the mid-1800s.

5) The El Patio Building, 117 N. Guadalupe St., built circa 1860-1864. This is now a law office for the Kellahan firm. Melton said it is the last of the Placita-style houses in the city.