WHAT IS THE BIG CITIES HEALTH COALITION?

The Big Cities Health Coalition (BCHC) is a forum for the leaders of America’s largest metropolitan health departments to exchange strategies and jointly address issues to promote and protect the health and safety of the more than 62 million people—or one in five Americans—they serve.

VISION
Healthy, more equitable communities through big city innovation and leadership.

MISSION
Advancing equity and health for present and future generations.

WHAT DOES THE COALITION DO?

Coalition members are on the front lines of public health in urban America, working each day to make it easier for people to get and stay healthy, and to be safe in their communities. These cities address a wide range of challenges everyday, including substance misuse, violence, and chronic and infectious disease. Health departments focus on prevention and lay the groundwork for healthy choices that keep people from getting sick or injured in the first place. They prepare for disasters, respond when public health emergencies occur, and lend support throughout the recovery process.
SPECIFICALLY, THE COALITION:

- Fosters strong collaboration between urban health departments;
- Provides for shared leadership and expertise on complex and often emerging public health challenges;
- Develops and shares best and promising practices; and
- Provides a unified voice on policy matters and takes advantage of advocacy opportunities primarily at the national level.
