
University of Delaware Clinical Psychology Doctoral Program Visit Day Friday, September 15, 2017

Clinical Science Ph.D. Program, University of Delaware

The inclusion of diverse viewpoints, perspectives, and experiences is critical to the success of psychological research and clinical work! The University of Delaware Clinical Psychology Doctoral Program Visit Day is an opportunity for research-oriented, undergraduate students and recent graduates from underrepresented groups (e.g., students who identify as an ethnic/racial minority student, low-income student, and/or first generation college student) who want to learn more about doctoral training in clinical science and the Clinical Science Program at the University of Delaware.

Accepted students will be invited to visit the Clinical Science program at the University of Delaware in Newark, Delaware on Friday, September 15, 2017. Travel, lodging, and meals will be provided for all attendees.

The visit day will include:

- Presentations on selecting a graduate program, applying to graduate school, graduate funding opportunities, mentoring, and student life
- Individual and small group meetings with program faculty members and graduate students to discuss students' research interests
- Research presentations and lab meetings
- A tour of our campus including research labs and the Psychological Services Training Clinic
- Social events and networking with current graduate students and faculty members

To apply: students should complete an online application:

https://delaware.ca1.qualtrics.com/jfe/form/SV_aY4E2t9KJQO9uD3.

The application requests:

- 1) Unofficial transcript (students may upload directly to the online application)
- 2) Demographic information (preference will be given to students from underrepresented groups including racial/ethnic minority students, first generation college students, and/or low-income students)
- 3) Student responses to questions about educational and career plans
- 4) Optional: Letter of support (may be uploaded directly to the online application)

Deadline: Applications are due Friday, August 18, 2017.

Questions? Email: Ctecc@psych.udel.edu

