Gender and Campaigning
Training Pack

Why and how to integrate gender equality into your campaigns

In recent years, gender equality and ‘women and girls’ have become the subject of an unprecedented focus by development actors, donor governments and the international community. Development NGOs are increasingly seeking to take up the cause of gender equality in their advocacy and campaigning, either by developing specific women’s rights campaigns, or by trying to incorporate a gender focus into other campaigns.

However, this new commitment is not always matched by an understanding of what challenging gender inequality means in practice. Integrating gender is sometimes difficult, especially without the right tools or expertise.

The Gender and Development Network (GADN) has therefore produced a training pack to provide some of the insights and practical ideas needed to understand why and how to integrate gender equality and the rights of women and girls into international development campaigns.

Who is it for?

The training course is aimed at campaigners and communications, fundraising or policy staff with a significant element of campaigning or advocacy in their role. It is intended for those who want to incorporate a gender equality or women’s and girls’ rights focus into international development campaigns. Previous knowledge of gender equality issues is not necessary to participate in the training.

What does the training pack include?

Written by a former NCVO senior campaigns consultant and gender experts from GADN, the off-the-shelf pack gives all the materials needed to run this one-day training day in-house.

The session can be delivered either by an experienced campaigner or women’s rights and development practitioner. The training programme is participatory, interactive and questioning. It allows participants to share their own views and experiences and creates a safe space in which to explore key issues. Trainers can adapt timings and content to reflect the specific experience and requirements of the training group.
The full pack includes:

- An introduction to the pack
- Detailed notes for the trainer and a training day plan
- 26 PowerPoint slides for the course
- A participant’s pack including 10 hand-outs

What is the Gender and Development Network (GADN)?

GADN is a diverse, effective and inclusive membership network made up of leading UK-based non-governmental organisations’ (NGO) staff, practitioners, consultants and academics working on gender, development and women’s rights issues. GADN enables members to share information and expertise, effectively lobby government and international bodies on gender and development issues and provide expert advice and comment on policies and projects. Our members work in partnership with development and advocacy organisations throughout the world.

The training was prepared for the Gender and Development Network by Bethan Brookes (former NCVO senior campaigns consultant, now freelance), Jessica Woodroffe (GADN), Francesca Rhodes (GADN) and Lee Webster (Womankind Worldwide). GADN is grateful to Womankind Worldwide for funding this training pack. Womankind Worldwide’s Women’s Rights Advocacy Toolkit is available from their website: www.womankind.org.uk.

November 2014

Contact:
GADN c/o ActionAid
33-39 Bowling Green Lane
London
EC1R 0BJ

Email: info@gadnetwork.org
Website: www.gadnetwork.org