JENNIFER DEAN'S PHILOSOPHY FOR HER LIFE AND WORK

I have always run my company with the same philosophy: God, Family, Work. I believe my clients are my boss and we dance to the beat of their drum. Our foundation is grounded in a much higher power and our infrastructure is based on the people who make this company a success.

What do you love most about what you do?

I have a passion for being an instrument to help people reach their potential. I believe when you live with purpose you live with peace. I have complete peace that this is my purpose in this season of my life.

What is your core virtue?

I believe that integrity and character are all you have and it means the most when you do the right thing when no one is looking.

ALWAYS THE CONSUMMATE professional in her signature suit, cuff links and tie (folded, not knotted – she plans to launch her own line of women's ties one day), Jennifer Dean oversees the daily operations of Dean's Professional Services, (DPS), her award-winning staffing, consulting and leadership development firm. The success of DPS, in part, stems from the inspiring and motivating philosophies and strategies she shares with her team, as well as her continual emphasis on self-improvement and customer service – both internal and external.

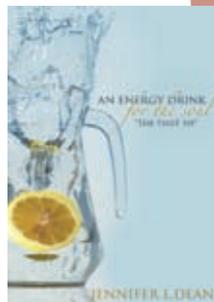

"Dean's Professional Services opened its doors in 1993, specializing in medical staffing, staff development and consulting. This is our foundation," Jennifer says. "We have branched out to provide staffing nationwide and in administrative/clerical, I.T, finance/accounting and light industrial/environmental. We pride ourselves on maintaining a professional, friendly and welcome atmosphere. Every single person that walks in our office is treated as if they were walking into our home and they are welcome."

A natural leader, Jennifer Dean is also a highly sought after motivational coach, author and speaker both locally and nationally. Outspoken, the customer service training and professional development company she founded, is an extension of the wisdom and experience she has gained as a business owner and her vehicle for sharing her unique perspectives with companies and organizations that desire to enhance their team's performance. "Taking your team to the super bowl and turning service inside out are workshops for each team player, coaches and owners on every level," she says. Some of her favorite topics include customer service, staffing, job hunting, economy changes, building dreams into reality; and she leads participants toward key performance goals in effective communication, team spirit, winning attitude and professionalism.

Jennifer says her strength comes from her firm foundation in her faith and her family. She and husband Mike have been married for 28 years and have three kids – Tiffany, Shannon and Aundre.

Her insight, inspiration and aphorisms tickle the funny bone and challenge each person to see themselves and their job in a new light. Call today to book Jennifer Dean at your next engagement or meeting.
