

This Week's Must See Events: No Rest for the Weary

by PADDY JOHNSON AND WHITNEY KIMBALL on MARCH 31, 2014 · 0 COMMENTS

EVENTS

Like 267
Tweet 21

Buy a Jeff Koons
"Balloon Dog"
Knockoff for $500

Barney Furnas at Sargent's Daughters

Any art nerd who's dreaming of taking this week off needs to take another look at their calendar. Galleries across the city are opening new shows, and there are plenty of talks too. Between art star Matthew Barney's tell-all talk with Sir Norman Rosenthal at The 92nd Y this and upcoming talent Sara Cwynar's show opening at Foxy Production this Friday, you'll not lack art to see and discuss.

EXHIBITION @ArtsWestchester

STEM + ARTS = STEAM

An interactive exhibition featuring 31 artists who explore how science, technology, engineering, math and art overlap and innovate

On View:
May 20 - August 16

artsw.org/steam
#STEAMexhibition

Fri

EFA Project Space

323 West 39th Street, 2nd floor

6 PM - 8 PM

Website

Several Circles

"The circle is simultaneously loud and soft" Kandinsky wrote once in a letter to a friend. He had some authority on the subject; Kandinsky had what's known as "synesthesia", a condition often described as "color hearing". This exhibition takes things a step further by working with a concept of "ideaesthesia"; a phenomenon in which concepts evoke perception-like experiences. The explanation of what this means is a little murky in the press release, which offers the scenario of understanding that "mu5ic" actually means "music" as one example but that's fine. We expect the artists' work—Joe Brittain, John Cage, Mia Goyette, Vladimir Havrilla, Rachel Higgins, Music Animation Machine (Stephen Malinowski), Mamiko Otsubo, Irgin Sena, Slobodan Stošić, Alina Tenser—will demonstrate show's thesis.

Curated by Marco Antonini.

<http://artfcity.com/2014/03/31/this-weeks-must-see-events-dont-count-on-sleeping/>