Dear Friends,

A voice is a powerful thing. From the shrill cries of a one-day old newborn withdrawing from heroin to the triumphant cheers of the homecoming queen, this year I have borne witness to the voices of abused and neglected children being lifted up by the work of our Court Appointed Special Advocates. Thanks to your support, their voices are being heard more widely than ever, enabling their needs to be met.

Ray is a seventeen year old diagnosed with autism who has been in foster care for several years. As a common feature of his diagnosis, his main method of communicating is through hand gestures, grunting, and sounds. He is unable to communicate with words. At a recent court hearing, it was portrayed to the Judge by other professionals involved that “Ray is unable to communicate.” The CASA volunteer, Liz, stood up to correct the information and shared, “Actually, Ray communicates well despite not using words, but often will only open up with those he is comfortable with.” It turns out that the professional, who believed Ray couldn’t communicate, was the fourth state caseworker assigned to work on Ray’s case in less than six months. He had remained silent during their entire visit. That day in court, Liz was Ray’s voice as she advocated for his needs, including increased visits with his siblings, a new educational placement, and changes in medical care. All of Liz’s requests to the Judge were granted because he knew that she truly was Ray’s voice that day.

Our advocates lift up, echo, and empower our children’s voices daily in ways large and small. Even more important is how the advocates find ways to teach our CASA children to use their own voices and empower them to advocate for themselves as they grow into successful adults.

Our goal has always been that every child victim of abuse and neglect has the benefit of best interest advocacy. That goal is now closer than ever thanks to your continued dedication and support. At tonight’s celebration, the Voices for Children Gala lives up to its name: a celebration of those who give voices to our children— all types of voices— loud ones and soft ones, measured voices and dominant voices, determined voices and persistent voices, encouraging ones and supportive ones; but most importantly, their voices.

Whether you are a donor, volunteer, advocate, or supporter, thank you for lending your voice to the hundreds of children in Passaic County who are relying on it each day to ensure their best interests are met.

My most humble gratitude,

Erica Fischer-Kaslander
Executive Director
What are you #WorkingFor?

ADP is proud to support The CASA Voices for Children Gala and its advocacy for ensuring the children’s voices are heard in court and child welfare system.
Dear Friends,

As many of you know, I have been an active board member at Passaic County Court Appointed Special Advocates (CASA) for many years.

I’m honored to chair the Voices for Children Gala for a second year because I care deeply about Passaic County CASA and its mission. This organization consistently makes a measurable impact on children who have been abused and/or neglected and placed in foster care. Passaic County CASA achieves success by pairing children in foster care with a trained volunteer advocate who is assigned to the child the entire time he or she is involved in the foster care system.

The CASA volunteer offers support and stability, while at the same time advocating for the child’s physical, emotional, psychological, and educational needs. Without parents to ensure that their needs are met and without an advocate speaking for them, children in foster care can easily fall through the cracks. Every child deserves to have a safe, permanent, and loving home, and the chance at a wonderful future. Passaic County CASA, time and time again, has provided care, concern, and opportunity to children in foster care.

Over the past year, Passaic County CASA achieved tremendous growth in our ability to serve children. Thanks to your support, Passaic County CASA now has 25 percent more Court Appointed Special Advocate volunteers than last year. Our goal for the coming year is to make sure that every child in Passaic County’s foster care system has a CASA volunteer by their side.

Tonight, we have the power to make this goal a reality!

Thank you for your support during the Voices for Children Gala, and throughout the year.

Sincerely,

Jonathan E. Aber
