Helping People Help Themselves

Four Ravens Occupational Therapy is committed to helping people help themselves. We work with clients of all ages and their families to overcome the challenges presented by any 'occupation' to make daily living simpler. With over 30 years of combined experience with both children and adults, our board certified and licensed therapists educate, train, and develop strategies that leverage our clients' strengths and abilities into skills for a better life.

Who needs Occupational Therapy?

Any individual that experiences difficulty in managing their daily occupations including productivity, self-care and leisure is a good candidate for occupational therapy. For children, the primary occupation is play. While school-based occupational therapy services focus on educational success, home-based occupational therapy addresses independent living skills for children with challenges in addition to neurological, cognitive and physical challenges that relate to occupations such as play, dressing, grooming, and being a productive family member. Four Ravens therapists are able to observe occupational performance in a natural environment and provide simple solutions for managing behaviors or other functional barriers to success in daily life.
