United Fund, Chest Campaigns Underway On MeC

The 1966 United Fund or Community Chest campaigns are well in progress in the major centers of the Maine Central system, with advance indications that railroad employees will again demonstrate their willingness to aid the less fortunate.

The Maine Central-Portland Terminal Company drive is still in progress, but Waterville-area railroaders already have exceeded their Community Chest quota, pledging a total of $1,781. Lewiston railroaders contributed $277 to their local United Fund effort, and Bangor's drive has just begun.

The company-wide campaign was opened early in October when a letter announcing the drive was sent to all employees by President E. Spencer Miller.

Another Birthday

In case you hadn't noticed, this is Volume 7, No. 1, of the Maine Central Messenger. This means we're starting our seventh year of continuous monthly publication.

Or, if you're of a statistical turn of mind, this is the 73rd issue, and the copy you are now reading is one of 321,300 that have been prepared, printed and circulated since November, 1961.

Railroad Jigsaw Puzzle—Maine Central Railroad crews are working at West Baldwin, putting together the 94 pieces of this huge culvert with a total of 4,390 nuts and bolts. The culvert, measuring 16 feet in diameter, will carry the waters of Dug Hill brook beneath the tracks of the railroad's Mountain Division. More than 13,000 cubic yards of earth and rock will be used to fill around the culvert, and the wooden trestle will be eliminated.

Keynoting the company effort, Mr. Miller's letter reads as follows:

This is the season of harvest, of Thanksgiving, and of helping the less fortunate.

Crews Complete Dug Hill Culvert

Engineering Department crews replaced Dug Hill Brook trestle at West Baldwin with a giant jigsaw puzzle in October, putting together the 94 sections of a 16-foot culvert and placing some 13,000 yards of fill.

The 160-foot trestle, which has spanned the brook since 1939, flooded destroyed a stone arch there, will be eliminated.

W. L. Morang's carpenter crew and D. A. Pomeroys' stone crew accomplished the task, first rerouting the brook around the construction site, then putting together the huge culvert, and finally burying it and filling the ravine under the track with gravel and riprap. When the job was done, the brook was allowed to resume its normal course, but this time through the new culvert.

The trestle replacement was an upgrading move in anticipation of new and heavier locomotives due in November.

President Miller Outlines Growth Of Maine Economy In Boston Speech

Dramatic growth of the Maine economy was cited in Boston Oct. 11 by the president of the Maine Central Railroad, who said the company's lower rates and modern equipment are major factors in Maine's industrial expansion.

E. Spencer Miller addressed members of the New England Railroad Club at the Sheraton-Plaza. He said Maine's industrial production has increased 23 per cent since 1960.

The Maine Central president cited advances in three of Maine's basic industries. "Pulp and paper manufacturing," he said, "which is the backbone of Maine industry, has increased from a dollar value of $432,000,- 000 in 1960 to $505,000,000 in 1965.

"While it is generally supposed that the textile industry has left New England, it has actually been growing in Maine. In 1960 the total value of manufactured textiles in Maine was $173,000,- 000, and in 1965, it was $195,- 000,000—up more than 12 per cent.

"A great deal has been said," Miller concluded, "most of which has added to confusion, concerning the desperate plight of the poultry industry in Maine, due to an alleged competitive advantage in feed costs enjoyed by competitors in the Delmarva region. I believe any fair-minded member of the poultry industry in Maine will concede that it

('Boost Maine' Talk Wins KJ's Praise

Augusta's Kennebec Journal, reacting to President Miller's address in Boston, had this to say in an editorial:

"It is always pleasant to tout your own horn when you can back it up your boasting with solid facts and figures. E. Spencer Miller, president of the Maine Central Railroad, indulged in such pleasantry in a talk Tuesday to members of the New England Railroad Club in Boston. Maine's industrial production, he asserted, has increased 23 per cent since 1960. A little modest crowing about this is certainly in order.

"There's little excuse for 'talking poor mouth' in discussing Maine's overall economy today. We thank Mr. Miller for doing a very good job of tooting Maine's horn."

(Miller—Page 8)
TO MY FELLOW EMPLOYEES:

Even a small railroad such as Maine Central brings a vast variety of problems to its officers each and every day. Some are new, and some are old ones in new postures. To the officers of the management team our railroad wears many different faces.

For instance, to the Chief Engineer it is 1207 miles of track, signals, bridges and buildings. To the General Manager it is a grid of train movements, of dispatching, of train orders and the most complicated negotiations with 19 different labor organizations.

To the Comptroller and Treasurer it is a matter of budgetary controls, of compliance with complicated accounting regulations of the I.C.C., keeping of records, constant development of new procedures and applications of machine accounting, of cost studies relating to profitability of segments of the railroad and to financing of new equipment, and to meeting of sinking funds in the most economic manner.

The Traffic Department is that one most closely in touch with the public, and its responsibilities in many ways are the greatest, because its efforts both in the technical field of rates and tariffs, and in the personal field of customer relations, account for the size of our income and the potentialities for our growth.

Our chief purchasing officer must look upon the railroad as a complex problem in supplying daily needs from inventory, of making the major purchases, such as locomotives and cars, in the most businesslike way, of seeing to it that specifications are fulfilled, and in selling surplus materials and scrap most advantageously.

The great joy coming from management of a small railroad lies in the fact that there is both time and necessity for the chief executive officer to give attention to every one of these important functions, and if he is on his job he should have more than a passing knowledge of proper operation in every field, sufficient to warrant the exercise of some judgment and more than a little guidance. To me, however, the railroad is chiefly 2,000 men and women who work for it and I am pleased that on a property as small as ours it is possible to know personally and call by name several hundred in all branches of service and hundreds of the million people who make up the population of the area we serve. Public Relations are a part of the job, and the picture of us which these people in Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont, which we are pleased to term the "North Country", have, has a great deal to do with our present and our future. It is gratifying when we find them with us and when we find industries, such as the poultry industry, commending us publicly, and to our Congressional representation, for the success of our efforts in reducing rates and keeping the industry not only competitive, but prosperous.

The very smallness of the Maine Central gives to its management a sense of completeness, which would be impossible on a larger property. I know every station on the line and every one of the 55 Agents in those stations. I can visualize the center of every town served by the railroad, every major industry, the sidetrack to it, where the main line is double tracked, where it is single tracked, and the turnouts. In Portland we are so close to all of the industries and people whom we serve that our response to requests in the fields of operations and traffic can be immediate. The managers of all of our leading mills are equally well known and we feel that we have a responsiveness to a local situation which could not be obtained from an office in a remote city in trunk line or western territory.

Our prospects are good, and from our close-range view, Maine Central is a sound and growing little railroad. Apart from merger and diversification, both of which we are alert to, there will be a continuing and ever growing satisfaction in attending closely to that railroad business stretching out over the 930 miles of road which we know so well.

E. Spencer Miller

Your Fair Share

Consider, for example, how much more difficult it would be if the present level of care for the handicapped children, the operation of the Boy and Girl Scouts, the YMCA and all the other United Fund agencies were to be reflected in our tax bills.

Consider, for another example, how difficult it would be to shoulder the burden of support for these agencies if they approached us individually, throughout the course of the entire year.

Consider, too, how much good these agencies do for our communities, and what a great responsibility their very existence removes from your own shoulders.

Consider your own good fortune, compared with others, and pledge your fair share in the current United Fund and Community Chest campaigns.
Monster Togue Leads Messenger Fishing Contest

A monster togue from Quebec waters is Bob Nurse’s bid for top spot in the 1966 Messenger Fishing Contest.

But Bob freely admits the big fish was taken by his wife, Velma, as the two were fishing at Lake Chibougamau, 150 miles from practically nowhere far north of Quebec City, Canada. The 12 pound, eight-ounce togue struck a trolled Chev-Chase lure exactly 20 furious minutes before it allowed itself to be netted.

The Chev-Chase, Bob says, is a small gold lure similar to the more familiar Mooselook wobbler. It also accounted for several brook trout in the three to four-pound class during the week Bob and Velma spent at Chibougamau.

The couple (Bob is a clerk in the Car Accounting Department, Portland) has made the 650-mile Chibougamau trip eight times before this year, each time returning with spectacular catches. Bob says the togue there are similar, but not exactly like those in Maine. They’re more highly colored, with red spots like a brook trout, and the meat is very pink. Bob says the natives (whenever you can find one) call these fish gray trout.

Chibougamau is at the end of a 150-mile woods road that leads north out of a Quebec forest and mining town called St. Felicien.

George Stanley In New Position

Promotion of George H. Stanley to the post of Loss and Damage Prevention Agent was announced by Horace N. Foster, comptroller and treasurer. Stanley assumed his new duties on July 15.

A graduate of Deering High School, class of 1946, Stanley was employed for a time by Oakhurst Dairy, Portland. He came to the Maine Central in February, 1956 and had been Head Clerk, Dairy and Miscellaneous Bureau in the revenue office until he was appointed to his new post. George and Mrs. Stanley, a stenographer in the Engineering Dept., reside at 640 Highland Avenue, South Portland.

Buzzell Promoted As Rourke Retires

Justin E. Buzzell, South Portland, has been named superintendent of car maintenance for the Maine Central Railroad and Portland Terminal Companies.

Richard F. Dole, chief mechanical officer, announced the appointment to be effective July 25, official date of Joseph D. Rourke, who has held the superintendent’s post since 1956.

Buzzell, who has served as Rourke’s assistant for the past eight months, joined the Maine Central in 1929 as a laborer. He was promoted to carman helper at the road’s Waterville shops, freight carman, and then to assistant foreman of the freight shops at Waterville. He came to Portland June 14, 1957, as general foreman, car department, at Rigby.

Mr. and Mrs. Buzzell reside at 35 Church Road, South Portland.

Note of Thanks

I wish to extend my thanks to all employees for their participation in the very generous purse presented to me on my retirement. It was very thoughtful and kind of you all. I shall miss not being with you daily, but hope to see you from time to time.

Sincerely,

Joe Rourke
Maine Railroad Golf Tournament
Scheduled Sept. 10 at Fairlawn

The annual Maine Railroad Golf Tournament will be held Saturday, Sept. 10 at the Fairlawn Country Club, East Poland, Me., with golfers representing all the state's railroads welcome. Chairmen Jerry Shea, Portland, and Larry Severance, Bangor, have announced the following:
Fairlawn is a public course, and cannot be closed for this event, nor will starting times be assigned. However, if you have a preferred starting time, or foursome, we will try to work you in close to the time on entry blank.
We hope everyone will be there between 7:30 and 9:30 a.m. Anyone with an established handicap, either State, club or league, please state with entry blank because the Committee will add two strokes to club or league. There will be three groups of players. The Committee will try to split the handicap so there will be equal number of players in each class. Trophies will be awarded to first gross and first net in each class. Prizes will be awarded in each class for the longest drive on the 18th hole and nearest the pin on the 11th hole.
Greens fees are $3 per person, payable at the course on the day of play.

through the United Fund or the Community Chest in the cities and towns of the Maine Central and Portland Terminal Companies.

These Companies, as most of you know, conduct only one campaign for funds annually, the effort now going on in the larger population centers of Maine to support the many welfare and community agencies whose civic worth is great to all of us even if we are so fortunate as to benefit only indirectly from their existence.

This year, as in the past, these Companies will help you make your contribution by providing payroll deductions, spreading the amount of your pledge over the full year. A generous gift, paid in modest automatic installments, will thus have small effect on your wages, but will have tremendous value to your community.

A fellow employee will contact you during the course of the Company campaign. He will answer any questions you may have and assist you in making your pledge for this worthwhile cause.

We will be pleased to continue our custom of presenting each employee who pledged at least $15 an attractive gift at the close of the campaign.

I urge all of you to participate in this endeavor, and to be generous in your support of the United Fund and Community Chest campaigns in your location.
