Old 470 Drive
Gets Assist At Waterville

Waterville area railroad men and women are rallying behind Mayor Donald H. Marden’s campaign for funds to place “470” in an attractive permanent location.

At an August 6th meeting called by Waterville Shops Superintendent A. H. Finnmore Mayor Marden outlined his plans for a memorial using the famed steam locomotive presented to the City of Waterville by President E. S. Miller in 1962.

Acknowledging the generous support of Maine Central Railroad for the project, the Mayor further praised the interest expressed by the representatives of various railroad unions attending the session.

When the treasured locomotive, last steam power to operate on Maine Central Railroad, was presented to the City, while hundreds of spectators applauded, during the celebration of 100 years of operation by Maine Central, it was believed it had been placed on a permanent site.

Subsequent developments, however, necessitated its being moved to make way for changes in the State of Maine’s highway project in the area. The railroad agreed to store 470 until it could be permanently placed where it would be a memorial to the railroads, available in a spot easy of access to tourists and area residents.

Early this year Mayor Marden started a vigorous drive to remove Old 470 from the railroad’s yards and place it on a site near the highway.

APPLICATION—Holes are drilled in the sides of the car and plates applied by use of a hand-pop riveter with a 1/4” snap-off rivet.

The Iron Hoss To Gallop Again
Through Famous Crawford Notch

The Mount Willard dwelling, a landmark high above Crawford Notch since 1887. Built to house McC crews, it served for some forty years as home for the late Section Foreman Loring S. Evans and his family and later became a bunkhouse for section crews. Crawford Notch Steam Railroad Inc. plans to use it as a railroad museum-gift shop.

The dream of a group of New England businessmen to operate excursion trains through famed Crawford Notch moves a step closer to reality this month.

September 4th is the date set by the New Hampshire Public Utilities Commission to begin hearings on the petitions of the Crawford Notch Steam Railroad Inc. Maine Central Railroad has agreed to lease its tracks in New England.

The job of equipping Maine Central’s complete car fleet with modern car identification symbols is nearly 50% completed, according to R. F. Dole, chief mechanical officer.

Multi-colored reflective strips carrying standard symbols to identify each car are being applied at Rigby, Waterville and Bangor Shops as Maine Central’s part in the Automatic Car Identification System, adopted by the Association of American Railroads.

The new system makes possible instantaneous location of any freight car in the country through a sophisticated scanning device that can read multi-colored “service stripes” on a freight car at speeds up to 80 miles per hour even in the most severe weather conditions. It makes the resultant information available to railroad personnel at central computer locations.

Such pinpointing of freight cars vastly increases the potential usefulness of the whole fleet, providing quicker turn-around and much faster service to shippers.

Thomas M. Goodfellow, president of the Association of American Railroads, calls the system “another new symbol of progress in the American railroad industry.” The use of this system, he says, “could mean an increase in the utilization and efficiency of freight cars amounting to as much as 500,000 miles per year.”

150,000 Golden Medallions Sold To Railroad Fans

Over 150,000 Golden Spike Centennial commemorative medallions in a choice of bronze or silver alloy have been sold to rail fans and coin collectors. Sold for $25 apiece, the medallions were authorized by Congress and struck by the U. S. Mint at Philadelphia, commemorating the 100th anniversary of completion of the nation’s first transcontinental railway system.
Happiness Is A Herd Of Herefords

Johnny Weeks and his flock.

If he had it to do over again, he wouldn't change a thing.

Maurice "Johnny" Weeks is a happy man who says he has enjoyed working for the railroad for 47 years and his "Ponderosa" is his pride and joy.

Rigby Engine House Foreman on the 3 to 11 trick, John went to work as a call boy at Thompson's Point at age 15, working his way up through the ranks as laborer, machinist's helper and machinist.

The Weeks "spread" is 110 acres of lush green farmland on Route 26 just beyond Wasson's Grove in West Falmouth, where 36 head of whiteface Hereford cattle graze peacefully "til a lusty call "Here, Boss" brings them nearer the sixteen room white farmhouse.

John and his wife Ethel moved into the house in 1939 and bought it in 1948. John started out with 10 head of calves. His herd brings dollars from dealers who prize his stock but it means rising at six to feed and water the animals. That doesn't seem to phase John a bit. He has been used to hard work from the time he was a boy in Newcastle.

A broad smile crosses his face as he talks of the improvements he has been able to make. He had the barn interior rebuilt in 1964 with new wood beam and side work and cement floors for 32 stalls. That job cost $5,500. Latest additions to the ranch equipment are a new 39 horsepower tractor and a mower.

He plowed up the land and added fertilizer and 21 tons of lime when he first bought the farm and the good results are a pleasure to see.

Weeks is grateful for his good neighbors; they pitched in to help him get all the hay on 63 acres of tillage in before the first of July and that's no small job.

Good stewardship has brought good results for the Weeks family and what's more, a lot of contentment.

Finnemore reports that all railroad departments represented in the Waterville area have signified their desire to contribute both financially and through donation of time to assure the success of the 470 venture.

Bulletins calling for support of the campaign have been posted throughout the Waterville Shops and Freight office area.

Among those attending the meeting were: Raymond McPhee, Executive Vice President, Waterville Area Chamber of Commerce; George K. Stevens, Paint Shop Foreman; Gloria Laliberte, Secretary, Waterville Shop; Leonard W. Stevens, Chairman, Stores Dept. Laborers' Union; John E. Larracey, President, Machinists' Union; L. I. Hill, Erecting Shop Foreman; Gerald Gagnon, Chairman, Brakeman's Union; Kenneth E. Reed, Local Chairman, Waterville Area, Maine Assoc. of RR Veterans; Albert H. Adams, Chairman, Electricians' Union; Simon M. Karter, Chief Clerk, Shops; Freeman A. Rollins, President, Laborers' Union; Calvin T. Clark, General Agent, Waterville Transportation Dept.; Paul A. any desired location at speeds far higher than it is humanly possible to read cars accurately. The information, fed into a railroad’s computers, which in turn are tied in with a centralized computing system connected to all the railroads will mean the instant location of any car in the fleet,” Goodfellow says.

Thinking Safety

By Laurence W. Sparrow

Why is it considered bad luck to walk under a ladder—or good luck to find a four leaf clover?

These are superstitions. Although their origins are not definitely known, numerous legends survive.

Superstitions still influence people and are dangerous if they get in the way of common sense—because sometimes they contain just enough truth to make them seem logical.

It is possible, for example, for a man on a ladder to spill paint or drop something, and it makes sense to be alert for such hazards. However, good sense becomes a superstition if it is stretched to the conclusion that all ladders have some power that people call “bad luck.”

A ladder is a tool, and like any other tool, can be dangerous if it is carelessly or improperly used or maintained. Tools you use on the job—be it a ladder, a lathe, a wheelbarrow of a wrench—do not hide good or evil.

A whole lawn or field filled with four-leafed clovers can’t protect you if you are a careless person—because “good luck” comes only when you realize that YOUR SAFETY DEPENDS UPON YOU.
TO MY FELLOW EMPLOYEES:

This Railroad's Earning Power

The apparent decline in the earnings of Maine Central are rightly a cause of concern to its employees and this concern merits an explanation and discussion of necessary remedies, having first diagnosed the causes. In 1950 the company handled 877,000,000 ton miles of freight contrasted with 1,011,000,000 in 1968. Despite a passenger loss in 1950 which under the ICC formula amounted to over $2 million dollars, our railroad produced a net income of $1,267,000 which contrasts with a net ordinary income for 1968 of a mere $966,000. So far in 1969 we have failed to produce any net income and indeed, if present trends continue, will be fortunate to wind up the year with a black figure.

What are the reasons?

Simply stated, costs of wages and materials have increased enormously while freight rates, that is, charges to our customers for services performed, have been held level to the tremendous benefit of our shippers in the geographical area which we serve. In 1950 the average wage per Maine Central employee, which includes everyone working for the railroad up through the president, amounted to $3,519. In 1968 the figure was $7,941. Thus, if we accept 1950 as a base and accord to it the index number 100, we would have to accord to 1968 the index number 226. From this simple analysis the reason for the decline of the railroad's earnings is clear and it further is apparent that except for tremendous economies and efficiencies contributed by management our position would have been desperate several years ago.

What is the cure?

We have come to the point when the obvious answer is a very substantial raise in charges to shippers. This has been avoided as long as possible and it is realized that no shipper of freight likes to pay more money for the same service but it is further realized that a vital, healthy railroad, capable of performing adequate service including car supply to shippers in its geographical area, is essential to them. Furthermore, let us look at what has happened generally. If we use once again the index 100 for the year 1950, truck rates nationally increased enormously by 1967 to an index number of 133. On the same basis railroad rates in the eastern district would have for the year 1968 an index of 104 and Maine Central considered alone had an index of 101. The wholesale price index for all commodities, assuming the figure 100 for 1950, amounted to 125 in 1968 and looking at the paper industry which accounts for 55% of our business and again using the index figure of 100 for paper product prices in 1950, we find that the index figure for 1968 is 151. Getting beyond the field of business and looking at government, we have just seen our Governor sign into law enormous new tax burdens for the State of Maine indicating the need for increased revenues there.

The conclusion is inevitable that this railroad and others must move and move speedily and aggressively for a dramatic increase in charges to customers in order to secure a fair return upon investment and to insure good service. In the course of raising prices substantially, some tonnage may be lost to subsidized competition but that is a risk which an enlightened management must take, since to stand still with the present price structure invites disaster and can at best lead only to a long slow decline.

Despite the foregoing it must be remembered that the railroad is a volume industry and that expanding business will lessen the necessity of higher unit prices and that our shippers have it within their power to help themselves by putting on our rails every possible pound of freight.

54% Of MeC People Have A U.S. Savings Bond Program

A report on the 1969 U. S. Savings Bond Campaign indicates that 50% of the railroad's employees have a bond purchase program.

With about 85% of the enrollment cards returned, 1969 Chairman E. P. Smith reports that 54% of Maine Central people carry on bond programs as contrasted with a lesser percentage of Portland Terminal employees.

Some sixty-six departmental chairmen and their agents did the job of circulating and reporting on 2,100 individuals invited to purchase U. S. Savings bonds by payroll savings.

Maine Central's bond efforts were lauded in March of this year by Louis W. Menck, national bond chairman for the railroad industry, as MEC became one of eleven railroads in the country to achieve new high levels of 50% or more of employees buying bonds.

Maine Central was 4th highest in the railroad industry division.

The Treasury Department recently recommended to Congress that the interest rate on U. S. Savings Bonds be increased from 4 ¾% to 5% on both newly purchased and already outstanding bonds. If adopted by Congress, as expected, this will make a bond purchase program even more attractive in days to come.

The Maine Central MESSENGER is published monthly at Portland, Maine, by employees of the Maine Central Railroad Co., and the Portland Terminal Co. It is circulated without charge to active and retired employees of these companies, and to customers and other friends throughout the Nation.

GENERAL OFFICES

Summer Thompson, revision clerk in the Revenue Office, recently attended the Portland Security School at the Reserve Training Center at Yorktown, Va. Summer is a Lieutenant in the Coast Guard Reserve and Executive Officer of the unit located in South Portland. At Yorktown, Tommy, as he is known in the office, studied federal regulations pertaining to waterfront facilities, ships, and boarding and stowage of cargo techniques. He also inspected piers and boarded ships at the Chesapeake & Ohio docks at Newport News, Va.

The Revenue Office girls recently spent a most enjoyable evening at Ogunquit. They dined at the Whistling Oyster and saw “South Pacific” at the Ogunquit Playhouse. Those attending were Grace Thompson, Marguerite Hollywood, Jan Caldwell, Irene Kelso, Dot Smith, Pauline Fronticardi, GG Spiers, Marion Stevens, Donna Roderick of the Transportation Office, Martha True, former stenographer in the Freight Claim office, and Mrs. Minnie Davis of Boston, who was a guest of Grace Thompson.

We all say “Welcome back” to Paul Robie, son of Asst. to Auditor Revenue and Mrs. “Chet” Robie, who received his discharge from the U.S. Navy, after being in Viet Nam for several months. One of Paul’s first requests for food was a “peanut butter sandwich.”

GG Spiers has returned to her duties in the Revenue Office after several weeks leave of absence.

Horace Foster, Comptroller and Treasurer, has returned from a vacation with his family at Wells Beach. His daughter Sandra has made her first flight, traveling to visit her sister Beth. Mrs. Foster and GG McCall have returned from their vacation in Louisiana. Sandra’s twin, Linda, enjoyed attending cheer leaders camp at UConn and all of us from Cape Elizabeth won the grand championship. The girls will be seniors at Cape Elizabeth High School.

Colonel Violet Lowell attended a production of “George M” at the Brunswick Music Theater and also saw “Olive” while on vacation in August.

50 YEARS OF FAITHFUL SERVICE—Stores Clerk M. F. Kane received a wallet from General Storekeeper H. F. Flynn recently as Kane rounded out a half century of service with Portland Terminal Company. Kane started his railroad work as a laborer at Engine House 2 on Danforth St. at the age of 19, working up through the ranks over the years as machinist helper spare and boiler maker spare, held power jobs and eventually became stores clerk.

His years of experience have placed him at the center of nearly all functions at Rigby Engine House. Well known for his exceptional memory, Frank can always provide the right detail of the job being done and you don’t have to ask twice. Not bashful about his thorough knowledge of tools and parts Frank has confounded many a salesman who wound up listening to his explanations of why a product wouldn’t “do the mustard.” Frank came to Rigby when it was new on December 23, 1923. The men from Engine Houses 2 and 3 were told to pack their overalls and water pails and board a freight car for their new jobs at Rigby that day. He remembers jumping out into three feet of snow and wading to the brand new building, with its modern equipment.

Frank marvels at today’s methods and improvements but has no regrets about the fact that his generation had to depend a lot on “bull strength” and ingenuity to do the job at hand. Frank is proud of the fact that he was never “laid off” once. The confidence placed in him by the first Rigby foreman, Wallace Whitehouse was no mistake. 21 and “scarred” that he couldn’t meet the assignment “check the fires and water in 40 diesels,” which arrived at one time once, Kane went to his boss and told him he was upset. “Don’t worry; I know you can do it”, Whitehouse assured him. The years have proved that, whatever the job, “he can do it”.

Identifies Old Photo As In Portland Union Station

To The Editor of The Messenger:

The palatial restaurant pictured in the August issue of THE MESSENGER was nowhere else but in the former Portland Union Station. It was opened in June of 1908. The original operators of what was an eating place famed for its food and for its service by waiters in black ties, presided over by a headwaiter in white tie and tails, were Elmer F. Woodbury, George E. Woodbury and their three sons.

La Belle Vie restaurant was taken over by Joseph Langley and when patronage became less and less as the public deserted the railroads for the more convenient family automobile it was operated by The Armstrong Company, headed by the late George Armstrong. Before it closed for good it had dwindled down to a double lunch counter of the Armstrong Company. —Harry M. Treat

Hampshire to the Crawford Notch Railroad for operation of a steam locomotive-drawn two-coach train from Bartlett or Notchland up the steep grade through the Notch to Crawford's and return.

The proposed 15 mile excursion daily from May 1 to November 1 would offer a view of the Saco River Valley and White Mountain scenery not available to the public except on charted trips planned by railroad enthusiasts since the MeC discontinued passenger service on its Mountain subdivision in 1938.

Four fall foliage excursion trips to the area have been sponsored by railroad buffs in the past ten years.

George E. McAvoy of Littleton, New Hampshire, president of Crawford House Resort and the Littleton Hotel Corporation, heads the group of businessmen backing the venture. His associates include: U. S. Ambassador to Spain Robert C. Hill of Littleton, also a director of United Fruit Company, Merck and Co., Inc., and Northeast Airlines and board chairman of Crawford House Resort; Douglas A. Philbrook of Gorham, general manager and director of Mt. Washington Summit Road Company; Edward M. Clark of Lincoln, operator and manager of Clark's Trading Post; and James T. McFate, manager of Hanover Inn and former president of the American Hotel-Motel Association.

McAvoy reports receiving many favorable comments and letters of inquiry since announcement of the proposed development was made.

CNSR also will operate a railroad museum and gift shop in the abandoned Trackman's house at Mt. Willard. Buildings to be used in connection with train operations include a station and waiting room at Bartlett or Notchland, the old Crawford Notch station and the Fabyans station. A wye for turning trains will be built at Crawford and another between Notchlands and Bartlett.

Excursion trains will operate in daylight hours only, to avoid any conflict with Maine Central's freight operations on the line.

President E. Spencer Miller noted that, although Maine Central will have no active part in the operation, it is "pleased to be a part of the venture in the territory along its tracks."

Last month the following members of Railroad Vets attended a Detroit-Red Sox baseball game at Fenway Park in Boston: John Briggs, President; John Burke, Harold Clark, Herbert Jenkins, Millard Storer, Ralph Hopkins and Harold R. Keniston. This trip was sponsored by the 60 Plus Club.

Mr. Walter Knox of Hollis, Maine was voted into membership at the last meeting. He is a former B. & M. engineer.

Robert Lewis at the Jewish Home is much improved.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold R. Keniston celebrated their 47th wedding anniversary.

Any member in the membership who are interested in joining a bowling league, call 775-1244. Next meeting is September 28th.
