ICMA NEWS
NOTICE OF ANNUAL MEETING 1995: SAN ANTONIO
The Annual Meeting of the International Center of Medieval Art will be held in conjunction with the College Art Association's Annual Conference in San Antonio, Texas. The ICMA business meeting will be held on Thursday, January 26, 1995 (12:30-2:00 pm) in Conference Room 7 at the Marriott Rivercenter Hotel. A buffet luncheon will follow the brief business meeting and will be free of charge to ICMA members.

FROM THE EDITOR
On November 5, 1994, the Publications Committee, chaired by Nancy Sevcenko, held its annual meeting. The questionnaires concerning the Newsletter that many of you filled out last year were discussed. Although many interesting comments and ideas were put forward by members, there was little unanimity on any particular issue. Two decisions were made. The column concerning recent publications, always eccentrically chosen at best, will no longer be published. Exhibition catalogues will, of course, continue to be listed with the exhibition that they document. And, members will note that the membership renewal form contains a space for your e-mail address. These addresses will be posted via e-mail on or about March 1. If you do not wish to have your e-mail address posted, please inform the office as soon as possible. Members are reminded that the ICMA fax number is the same as its telephone number: (212) 928-1146.

PROGRAM COMMITTEE
Members of the ICMA are urged to submit nominations or self-nominations for three openings on the new Committee on Programs. Nominees must be members of the ICMA and should not be members or advisors of the Board of Directors. Nominations may be submitted at any time up to or at the annual meeting in San Antonio. The Committee will begin its work after the spring Board meeting in Kalamazoo. Terms are for one, two, and three years. Send your nominations to Elizabeth Parker, Secretary of ICMA, The Cloisters, Fort Tryon Park, New York, NY 10040.

ICMA SESSIONS: COLLEGE ART ASSOCIATION, KALAMAZOO, LEEDS

CAA SESSION FOR 1995: ICMA will sponsor a session on Body Part Reliquaries and Body Parts in the Middle Ages at the Annual Conference of the College Art Association to be held in San Antonio, Texas. The session, to be held on Thursday, January 25, 1995 from 9:30 to noon, will be chaired by Caroline Walker Bynum and Paula Gerson. Harvey Stahl will be the discussant. Speakers will be Barbara Drake Boehm, Charles Talbot, Professor at Trinity College, will speak on the medieval sculpture and painting collection at the McNay Art Institute. The agenda for the meeting and check-off boxes for the lunch, as well as a proxy form for those unable to attend, can be found on the last page of the Newsletter. Please return the form by January 5, 1995. We look forward to seeing many of you at this annual event.

LEEDS SESSIONS FOR 1995: ICMA will sponsor two sessions on Art History and Science in Tandem: A Fruitful Collaboration at the International Medieval Congress to be held at the University of Leeds from July 10-13, 1995. These sessions have been organized by Pamela Z. Blum and Charles Little, co-directors of the Provenance Study of Limestone Used in Medieval Sculpture. Papers will be delivered by Annie Blanc, “Les principales carrières de pierre statuaire dans le Bassin Parisien;” Stephen Murray, “The Chronology of Amiens Cathedral: Scientific Evidence from Wood and Stone;” Anne PRACHE, "What Neutron Activation Analysis Reveals About Chartres Cathedral;" DANIEL KLETEK, "Sculptural Elements from Saint-Guilhem-le-Désert in Light of Recent Neutron Activation Analysis;" DANIELLE JOHNSON, "Dispersed Objects from the Abbey of Saint-Rémi de Reims in American Collections;" and PAMELA Z. BLUM, "Fruits of the Collaboration: Disentangling the Centuries in the Sculpture of Saint-Denis." Both sessions will be moderated by CHARLES LITTLE. For information: International Medieval Institute, Parkinson Building 1.05, University of Leeds, Leeds LS2 9JT, UK.

RESOURCES IN MEDIEVAL ART
THE GETTY CENTER FOR THE HISTORY OF ART AND THE HUMANITIES

Since 1984, the Getty Center for the History of Art and the Humanities has been developing a photographic archive of manuscript illumination. Currently, there are about 80,000 photographs arranged on open shelves accessible to scholars using the Photo Study Collection. 53,000 of the photographs have been catalogued on STAR, an in-house database. The Getty Center does not provide photographs for publication. Copyright is retained by the libraries or the private owners. Sources of photographs used by the Photo Study Collection include scholars' archives and collections, commercial photographers, and campaigns of new photography undertaken by the Center. Recent acquisitions of particular interest are:

BELOTE PORCHER, Paris, Bibliothèque Nationale. Black-and-white photographs taken during a photographic project headed by the then-curator of manuscripts, Jean Porcher, between 1947 and 1954 yielded 26,000 photographs of manuscript illumination in the regional libraries throughout France. Intended for a huge visual corpus of French manuscript illumination, these photographs were never printed (except as contacts). Now for the first time, researchers in Paris and at the Getty Center will have access to this rich collection.

MANUSCRIPTS IN RUSSIAN LIBRARIES. Photo campaigns in collaboration with the Institut de Recherche et d'Histoire des Textes, were carried out in September, 1991 and in June, 1993 to microfilm and photograph in color and black-and-white, European manuscripts in the National Library of Russia. This material is available at the Getty Center and at the Institut de Recherche et d'Histoire des Textes Photothèque in Orléans, France.

This fall, the Getty Center, with the Institut de Recherche et d'Histoire des Textes, photographed manuscripts in the National Museum Library in Prague. Other libraries from which the Getty Center has significant holdings include: Baltimore, Walters Art Gallery; Berlin, Staatsbibliothek; the Cleveland Museum; Geneva, Bibliothèque Publique et Universitaire; the Hague, Royal Library; Milan, Biblioteca Ambrosiana; Munich, Staatsbibliothek; New York, Pierpont Morgan Library. Among the Getty Center's holdings of scholars' archives and photographic archives are: François Garnier, Robert Branner, Mark Lamsburgh, James Marrow, Thomas Chilgren (Anglo-Saxon Corpus), Walter Oakshott, Erwin Panofsky, Tillman Buddensieck, Bodo Brinkmann, Judith Testa, Alinari and Giraudon.

For the medieval section of the Photo Study Collection, readers wanting an appointment should contact MARTHA STEELE 401 Wilshire Boulevard, Suite 700, Santa Monica, CA 90401-1455. E-mail: ECS2C2E@mps.oac.ucla.edu; telephone: (310) 458-9811.

THE WORLD OF THE VIKINGS, developed by the National Museum of Denmark, the York Archaeological Trust and Past Forward is available from the last mentioned at: 1 Pavilion, York YO1 2NA, England. Telephone: 0904-670825; fax: 0904-640029. This CD-ROM for the Macintosh (also available on Videsdisk) contains 3,500 full color images plus twenty minutes of video relating to the Vikings. A research database is provided allowing users to search or browse the images, which can then be exported to DTP packages or word-processors.

The Patrologia Latina Database on CD-ROM is the electronic form of the complete Patrologia Latina - text, notes, glosses, and indexes. The database can be searched for single words, phrases, or collocations, and search terms can be linked by Boolean operators. It is available from Chadwyck-Healey, Ltd., Cambridge Place, Cambridge CB2 1NR, England. Telephone: 0223-311479; fax: 0223-66440.

CETEDOC Library of Christian Latin Texts (CLC) is available from BREPOLIS Publishers, Steenweg op Tielen 68, B-2300 Turnhout, Belgium. Telephone: (014) 402500; fax: (014) 428919. This CD-ROM consists of three main parts: the full text of the whole Corpus Patrum Latinorum (all the texts edited by the Corpus Christianorum, Series Latina, and Continuatio Medievalis); the corpora of several authors (Augustine, Jerome, Gregory the Great, and others); and a number of authors not yet published in the Corpus Christianorum (e.g. the Etymologiae of Isidore of Seville). The CD contains 945 texts from 211 authors. An update with new editions will be published every two years. A search screen enables the user to select one or more author, work or word.

John James has available a database of all Early Gothic buildings in the Paris Basin, comma delimited, including saint-name, déparment and map grid. He also has established dating to the nearest decade for all parts of 680 key buildings 1140 to 1240, with a costing for each part. These are available through e-mail, either by faxing to +61 47 84 3151 or by e-mail to gothic@sydney.dialix.oz.au. He is preparing a graphical database for 20,000 capitals from the same group of churches.

REPORT FROM THE FIELD: HENRY MAGUIRE ON GREECE

Undoubtedly the major developments in medieval art history and archeology in Greece during the past year have concerned museums. In the city of Thessaloniki a large new Museum of Byzantine Culture has just been constructed, opposite the Archeological Museum, and the foundations have been prepared for extensive additions to the Byzantine Museum in Athens. Recent visitors to Thessaloniki will already be familiar with the well-laid-out displays of Early Christian and Byzantine art and archeology in the White Tower (presenting the history of Thessaloniki) and the crypt of the basilica of St. Demetrios (portraying the archeology of that church and the cult of its patron saint). The new Museum Byzantinou Politismou, which has been funded in part by the Integrated Mediterranean Programmes of the European Union in preparation for Thessaloniki's future role as Cultural Capital of Europe, will allow for exhibitions on a much more generous scale. Besides its permanent exhibition galleries, the new museum will house spaces for temporary displays, as well as spacious conservation laboratories devoted to different classes of materials, and large storerooms. Anyone who has visited the Ephoria of Byzantine Antiquities in their previous picturesque, but cramped quarters around the rotunda of St. George, will immediately appreciate what a difference the new museum will make to the display and conservation of the medieval artifacts of Thessaloniki. The Museum of Byzantine Culture opened one gallery this autumn with a small exhibition of objects of Macedonian provenance, but there are ambitious plans for the future. The permanent galleries will be arranged to emphasize a contextual approach to Byzantine art and archeology, including the presentation of domestic, military, and religious life, shown through a wide range of media, from coins and seals to icons, frescoes, and large-scale sculptures. Due attention will be given to the rich collections of Byzantine and post-Byzantine ceramics from Thessaloniki and other towns of Macedonia. The new building will allow a full and up-to-date exhibition of recent discoveries from archaeological excavations, including the notable Early Christian cemeteries of Thessaloniki and its area. There are also plans for regular scholarly meetings and conferences in a lecture hall that has been incorporated into the building.

In Athens, the Byzantine Museum, not to be outdone, has embarked upon its own ambitious expansion, which is scheduled for completion in three years time. Current visitors to the museum will find a large excavation beside the building and the display space consequently somewhat curtailed, but the museum is still open. On the other hand, visitors to the Benaki Museum will find it completely closed, but in the best of causes, for this building also is undergoing renovation and expansion. In the provinces, a new Museum of Byzantine Art has opened at Kastoria. It has an important collection of icons from the churches of that city. Finally, mention also should be made of a new display of Early Christian material in the museum at Amphipolis, a site that is now more than ever deserving of a visit, for the reasons that will be explained below.

There have been several notable temporary exhibitions in Greece, among them the Cretan icons shown at Herakleion and at the National Gallery of Athens, and the icons of Corfu displayed on the occasion of the meeting of the Council of the European Union on that island. These exhibitions reflect an increasing interest among both scholars and the public in post-Byzantine art in Greece, which is now providing a rich field for new research not only in icons, but also in fields such as wall-painting and metalwork.

In the realm of archeology, recent new discoveries include decorated tombs of the Early Christian period, which were uncovered by the Byzantine Ephoria of Thessaloniki at the site of Louloudia, to the west of the city, in the aftermath of work on the new railway line. Ongoing medieval excavations include the dig of the American School at Corinth, where a monastic complex of the Frankish period has been found, together with associated shops. It is hoped that this excavation will throw new light on cultural interactions and trade patterns during this somewhat neglected epoch of Greek history. At the important site of Amphipolis, in the north of Greece, extensive cleaning operations around the walls of the city have revealed in much greater clarity the plan of the town and the phases of its fortifications during the early Byzantine period. Visitors to this site, no longer having to locate the monuments within a thick snake-infested undergrowth, will find the experience much more rewarding. Another monument that has emerged resplendent from recent cleaning is the great mosaic of the Ascension in the dome of Saint Sophia in Thessaloniki. It should be seen before smoke once again obscures its brilliance.
The newly cleaned frescoes of the Holy Apostles church in the same city will also repay a visit. It is, moreover, anticipated that the rotunda of St. George will once again be open within a year, after the restoration of its fabric and its mosaics, which suffered from damage in the earthquake a few years ago. This report sadly must close with the news of the death in August of Sotirios Kissos, the Director of the 11th Ephorate of Byzantine Antiquities in Veroia. He was responsible for looking after a great wealth of material, including the magnificent collections of icons of Veroia and Kastoria, and the many painted churches of those two cities. His concern for the monuments in his care was unflagging, and the welcome that he accorded to foreign visitors unfailing; his loss will be deeply felt. Another greatly-missed Greek scholar was remembered in the late summer of this year by Thymia se mene tes Laskarinias Boura, published by the Benaki Museum. These two volumes contain fifty-nine articles devoted to Byzantine art and archeology, many of them written by Laskarina Boura’s friends and colleagues in North America. Another memorial volume will appear shortly as number 17 in the series of the Delton tes Christianikes Archaiologikes Hetaireias. It commemorates the work of Doula Mouriki, a noted historian of Byzantine art, who also has close links with the United States. An international conference on Byzantine Cypress was held in her memory at Princeton last May.

OBITUARIES
RUTH BLUMKA

Ruth Blumka, the prominent New York dealer of medieval and Renaissance works of art who was currently serving as an ICMA Advisor died on October 10, 1994. Ruth and her late husband Leopold were responsible for bringing many major works of medieval art to American museums and collections, among them works from the renowned Viennese collections of Albert Figdor and Oskar Bondy. The Blumkas counted among their clients Robert Lehman, Jack and Belle Linsky, and Marjorie Merriweather Post. Known for her contagious enthusiasm for art, Ruth introduced many young collectors to medieval and Renaissance art. In addition, over the years the Blumkas gave major works of art to The Metropolitan Museum of Art, the Cleveland Museum of Art, the Walters Art Gallery in Baltimore, the National Gallery in Washington, the Minneapolis Museum of Art, the Cincinnati Art Museum, and the Louvre. Both her continuous support of ICMA and her hosting the ICMA reception at last year’s CAA conference were among her many acts of generosity.

JANE HAYWARD

Anyone who knew Jane Hayward can recount a story to illustrate Bill Forsyth’s recent portrayal of Jane as a scholar who relentlessly sallied forth with “all her flags flying.” Until her death on October 30, 1994 at the age of 76, Jane maintained her flags unfurled: dictating additions to her catalogue of The Metropolitan Museum of Art’s collection of medieval and Renaissance stained glass; organizing committees; looking ahead to new projects. This unflagging and uncompromising energy was applied in equal measure to all her causes—stained glass, ICMA, and cats alike. Her’s was a unique spirit, one born of extraordinary will and expectations. Many voiced the belief that Jane was immortal; certainly she conducted herself as though she were.

A curator at The Cloisters from 1967, Jane worked tirelessly to establish the scholarly study of stained glass in the United States, founding the American Committee of the Corpus Vitrearum and helping to establish the Census of Stained-Glass Windows in America. To this end, she was a shrewd and gifted acquisitor for the Museum. In addition to her pioneering exhibition highlighting the Museum’s collection, Stained Glass of the Middle Ages and Renaissance (1972), the special exhibition held at The Cloisters in 1982, Radiance and Reflection: Medieval Art from the Raymond Pitcairn Collection, was a hallmark of Jane’s comprehensive knowledge and connoisseurship. Her catalogue for the Corpus Vitrearum of the Museum’s collection of medieval stained glass was in the final stages of preparation at her death.

As significant as Jane’s work as a scholar was her legacy as a teacher. From 1971, she served as an adjunct professor at Columbia University, where she trained generations of younger scholars. Studying with Jane was a joyful immersion into the object. Before being awarded a Ph.D. from Yale University in 1958, she began her career as an artist, working as a technical illustrator for the Navy during the Second World War and earning her B.F.A. at the University of Pennsylvania. Her prodigious eye and visual memory lay at the core of an inspiring passion for and commitment to the study of stained glass. She was the most generous and demanding of teachers. One learned through her example. Of all her passions, the International Center of Medieval Art captured her unshakable devotion. From the legendary feasts of St. Polycarp, to her efforts in securing an office at The Cloisters, to her indefatigable service on the Finance Committee, Jane was a determined advocate for ICMA. She relished the contact with her colleagues and believed firmly in the mission of the organization. (It is perhaps telling that Robert’s Rules of Order was the only permanent fixture on her desk.) Her 1987 election as a Fellow for Life was a source of tremendous pride and satisfaction.

Jane was a pioneer: she prized being one of the first women to graduate with a Ph.D. from Yale University in the History of Art, yet she was genuinely surprised by the suggestion that she and other women of her generation had forged opportunities now enjoyed by younger female scholars. In this and in all her endeavors, Jane stood for excellence.

Following Jane’s wish, a memorial fund has been established to benefit The Cloisters Library.

RICHARD KRAUTHEIMER

Richard Krautheimer died in Rome on October 31, 1994, at the age of 97. Born in Fürth, Krautheimer began to study law at the University of Munich, but was converted to art history by the lectures of Heinrich Wölfflin and the history of architecture by Paul Frankl. He received his doctorate from the University of Halle with a thesis on mendicants' churches (Die Kirchen der Bettelorden in Deutschland, 1925) and his license for university teaching at Marburg, on a book on medieval synagogues (Mittelelterliche Synagogen, 1927). In 1933 he and Trude Krautheimer-Hess, whom he had married nine years before, joined the ranks of German-Jewish emigrés, going first to Rome and then, in 1935, to the U.S. Krautheimer taught for two years at the University of Louisville, moved to Vassar College in 1937, and in 1952 took a full-time position at the Institute of Fine Arts. He retired from the Institute in 1971 and spent the rest of his life in Rome, in a spacious apartment in Palazzo Zuccari (part of the Biblioteca Hertziana). He died suddenly, of heart failure, without ever losing an iota of memory or of the reasoning power that would have made him a master jurist; had he not chosen art history instead. In seventy years of extraordinary scholarly productivity, Richard Krautheimer published over sixty articles and eleven books, including the five volumes of the Corpus Basilicarum Christianarum Romae (begun when he was 30 and completed 50 years later, in 1977), Lorenzo Ghiberti (co-authored with Trude, 1956), the Pelican history of Early Christian and Byzantine Architecture (currently available in its fourth edition, revised with Slobodan Ćurčić), Rome: Profile of a City, 312-1308 (1980), and Three Christian Capitals (1983). He created the field of early Christian architecture in America, and his ideas and historical formulations continue to be central to many areas of medieval studies, not just the history of buildings. Among his most influential publications in this regard are the classic "Introduction to an Iconography of Medieval Architecture" (1942), "The Carolingian Revival of Early Christian Architecture" (also 1942), "The Architecture of Sistus III: A Fifth-Century Renaissance" (1961), and "The Constantinian Basilica" (1967). For anyone who did not know him, his memoirs provide a vivid sense of his personality ("And Gladly Did He Learn and Gladly Teach," Rome: Tradition, Innovation and Renewal, 1991).

To those of us who were fortunate to sit at his feet, in Louisville, Poughkeepsie, New York, or Rome, his voice rings out from every page he wrote. He was one of the most remarkable and inspiring teachers American art history has known. To his advisees he was a second father, stern when need be, but also tolerant and understanding, an unplumbable source of knowledge and wisdom, and a copious font of anecdotes, reminiscences, and laughter. His passing leaves a hole in our hearts.

GRANTS AND FELLOWSHIPS

GRANTS FOR TRAVEL TO INTERNATIONAL MEETINGS ABROAD provides funds for scholars who will read papers or have a major, official role in the meeting. Applicants must hold Ph.D. or its equivalent and must be citizens of the U.S. Deadline: February 1, 1995. Amount: $500. Period: For meetings June 1, 1995 to June 1, 1996. For information: Office of Fellowships and Grants, American Council of Learned Societies, 228 East 45th Street, New York, NY 10017-3398. Telephone: (212) 697-1505.

The BEINECKE RARE BOOK & MANUSCRIPT LIBRARY AT YALE UNIVERSITY offers short-term fellowships to support visiting scholars pursuing post-doctoral or equivalent research in its collections. The fellowships, normally granted for one month, support travel to and from New Haven and provide a monthly living allowance of $2,000. Deadline: January 15. For information: Director, Beinecke Library, P.O. Box 208240, New Haven, CT 06520-8240.

The COLLEGE ART ASSOCIATION is accepting applications for its Professional Development Fellowship Program for Artists and Art Historians. Opportunities are available for terminal degree students earning an M.A. or Ph.D. in art history, or an M.F.A. in studio art in the spring of 1996. Each fellowship provides funding for two years. In the first year, students are awarded direct grants toward meeting expenses in preparing their dissertation, thesis, or exhibition. In the second year, after completing their degrees, fellows are placed in professional positions in partnership institutions which may include museums, universities, or art centers. Placement positions may be for one or two years. Deadline: January 31, 1995. For information: Fellowship Program, College Art Association, 275 Seventh Avenue, New York, NY 10001. Telephone: (212) 691-1051.

The NATIONAL ENDOWMENT FOR THE HUMANITIES offers fellowships through two programs, Fellowships for University Teachers and Fellowships for College Teachers and Independent Scholars. Tenure must cover an uninterrupted period of from six to twelve months. The earliest that Fellows may begin tenure is January 1, 1995. Maximum stipend: $30,000. Deadline: May 1, 1994. For information: Division of Fellowships and Seminars, Room 316, National Endowment for the Humanities, 1100 Pennsylvania Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20506. Telephone: (202) 606-8466 or 8467.

Telephone: (202) 342-3272.

Oxford University will host an international interdisciplinary conference, By the Hand of a Woman: Judith and Her Descendants, in June, 1996. Short paper proposals on this theme or its variations from any of the following disciplines are invited: anthropology, art history and criticism, cultural history, feminist studies, film studies, literature, music, performing arts, philosophy, psychology, religious studies, sociology, and theology. Proposals must be submitted in writing by May 1, 1995. North American proposals should be mailed to: Dr. Diane Apostolos-Cappadona, Liberal Studies Program, Georgetown University, Washington, DC. 20057-1075; European proposals should be mailed to: Dr. Margarita Stocker, St. Hilda’s College, Oxford OX1 1DY, England.

EXHIBITIONS

Homage to Saint Mark. Art from Venice and Europe is at the Doge’s Palace until February 28, 1995. A catalogue will be published by Electa.

Animals as Symbol in Medieval Illuminated Manuscripts will be at The Pierpont Morgan Library from April 6, 1995 until August 27, 1995. Using examples drawn from the Library’s collection of illuminated manuscripts, the exhibition explores the various types of animal imagery found in medieval art.

From January 24, 1995 until April 9, 1995, The J. Paul Getty Museum will house Illuminated Secular Manuscripts. Twenty illuminated manuscripts will be on display.

Memory in the Middle Ages will be at the Boston College Museum of Art from February 17 until May 23, 1995. This will be the first exhibition to examine the profusion of ways in which memory played an integral part in the formulation of images and thought in the Middle Ages as well as in the neo-Medieval monuments in New England during the nineteenth and twentieth centuries. A catalogue will be available. For information: (617) 552-8587.

Medieval Monsters: Dragons and Fantastic Creatures will be at the Katonah Museum of Art from January 15 until April 16, 1995. The exhibition focuses on imaginary animals depicted in the arts of the Middle Ages in western Europe. A special section is devoted to medieval armor and a video presentation on gargoyles enhances the exhibition. The guest curator is Janetta Rebold Benton, Professor of Art History at Pace University.

Federico II. Immagine e poteri will be held at the Castelsvevo in Bari from January 27-April 25, 1995. A catalogue is available.

JOURNALS

Medievalia Archaeologica bohemica 1993 (articles in Czech with English, French and German summaries) will appear once a year as a supplementary volume of the periodical Památky archeologické. The editor is the Institute of Archeology, Letenská 4, CZ-11801, Praha 1, Czech Republic. To order, contact Kubon & Sagner, P.O.B. 340108, D-8000 Munich, Germany.

SITES, MONUMENTS, MUSEUMS

The Metropolitan Museum of Art has purchased a thirteen-inch-tall brass, lion aquamanile. Acquired from Sotheby’s, the lion was made in Nuremberg around 1400.

According to findings by Interpol, fifty-two icons of Byzantine date or style stolen from churches and monasteries in Greece have been found in the Museum of Antwerp. It is not yet known if the twenty-two icons stolen fourteen years ago from Ayios Nicholas, Kozani are among them. The District Attorney of Kozani has asked for the assistance of the Belgian authorities in order to return the icons to Greece.
SUMMER PROGRAMS

The National Endowment for the Humanities is sponsoring two Summer Seminars for College Teachers of interest to medievalists.
