

OUR MISSION

Founded in 2014, the Abigail Adams Institute is committed to building intellectual community and cultivating scholarly habits.

We provide a range of programming to the Harvard community, including reading and discussion groups, weekend and summer seminars, workshops, lectures, and conversations with faculty.

The name of the Institute honors the Massachusetts native Abigail Adams, whose wise counsel shaped the early development of the American nation.

SUMMER PROGRAMS

Each summer the Abigail Adams Institute hosts one or more intensive one to two week-long seminars. The summer seminars are an opportunity for advanced undergraduates, graduate students and select professionals to inquire into existentially meaningful questions through the study of economics, politics, culture, and philosophy.
