Good Friday Friends,

Well, my husband and I ventured out to do a bit of Christmas shopping. Wow what an eye opener. We decided everyone took Friday off to go shopping. It seemed like every time I found what I wanted for one of the grandkids, it wasn't the right size and there was no size in that item. We spent over 2 hours in one store trying to find items on our gift list. We laughed and said this would be easier just to give them a gift card, lol. All in all, we had a successful day! Now on to hopefully getting our tree decorated tonight when our grandsons come over.

I don't know about your families and the holidays, our family before Thanksgiving had a couple of gatherings and later found out, several of the family there, became ill shortly after. There must have been some illness floating around. Please be careful as we get into the Christmas festivities with family and friends. We must continue to be cautious and remember that not only is that virus still out there, but we also have the flu season that we're coming into, so be kind to yourself, be kind to others.

No Leadership news this week, but please be thinking about who could benefit from the scholarships next year. It will be spring before we know it. The scholarship is for both men and women. Check out the website and share the information.

Our next Zoom gathering (I was corrected) will be January 22, 2022.

We have an exciting possibility coming up in January. A friend and colleague reached out to me about her sister and her endeavors with a new book. I'm really excited about reading her work. She will be sharing with us before it's even gone to a publisher. She's sending me her manuscript in January and then, hopefully I will be able to share it with you. She would like for us to offer her feedback and she is willing to share with us her thoughts and her feelings. So, we have something to look forward to in the weeks ahead!

News from the farm:

I did not have a picture last week to show you of Bartholomew. I am sharing the picture of him I took yesterday so you can see how cute he really is. And he is beginning to bounce higher. My husband said that's probably why he is here; most fences would not contain him.
As we continue through the advent season, I pray that each one of us are finding the wonderful expectations fulfilling. Hope, Peace, Joy, Love and our ultimate destination, Christ!

Blessings,
