The third Career Development Workshop was successfully organized by The Sino-American Pharmaceutical Association-Connecticut (SAPA-CT) in collaboration with the Association of Chinese Students and Scholars (ACSSY) at Yale University on April 20, 2019.

The aim of the workshop is to help students and young professionals to spring forward to the right career path and arm them with the new tools to reach their career goals. SAPA-CT invited six speakers with a variety of backgrounds, from attorney at law to biotech company, and leadership training firm which attracted students and scholars from Yale University, University of Connecticut, and Columbia University, and professions from biotech and pharmaceuticals etc.

Dr. Yan Yan, SAPA-CT acting president announced the event and gave an introduction of SAPA-CT. Dr. Tycho Heimbach, AAPS Ambassador Chair of 2019 introduced American Association of Pharmaceutical Scientists. Dr. Zhen Huang, a director from Sponsor, Protheragen presented overview of company investment plan. Attorney Yaran Pan presented US immigration rules and challenges. She has kindly offered many practical tips on how to apply for a working visa as a foreign student.
Yaran Pan, attorney at law, has kindly offered many practical tips on how to apply for a working visa as a foreign student. Many attendees are experiencing the transition between students and employees, and this talk gave an opportunity to learn from a professional lawyer.

Dr. John Sun was addressing a speech in “Re-thinking the Meaning of Career”

Dr. John Sun, Global Program Lead of Novartis, kindly shared the experience of his career path and provided constructive suggestions on career planning and development by encouraging the attendees to rethink the meaning of career. Juliet Hart, as a Principal and Founder of Hart & Chin Association, led a discussion about what is the career goal and what is the purpose of coming to the career workshop. She inspired innovation of the attendees to think and find our own potentials instead of following others blindly, to further develop the leadership capabilities of individuals.

Dr. Tycho Heimbach from Novartis kindly offered the practical tips on writing a resume and preparing for interviews, suggesting job seekers to think from the position of hiring managers. For the audience, especially students with no prior industry experience, he suggested to read NDA reviews from FDA website to gain knowledge on drug development.

Howard Stamato was starting a speech about “We Learn From Our Mistakes”

Howard Stamato, an associate direction of Global Regulatory Sciences-CMC at Bristol-Myers Squibb, talked about how to get up to speed faster and smarter by vividly describing the potential situations we may confront in the career development and providing the attendees with the corresponding strategies. He emphasized the importance of learning from our mistakes in our work.

Lauren Supraner was providing a unique perspective about “Selling Yourself at Work”

Lauren Supraner, president of CAL learning, provided a unique perspective to the plenary section. She persuaded students and scholars, who speak English as a second language, to step out of our comfort zone and embrace multicultural environments. By communicating with colleagues effectively, students will gain more opportunities in their professions.
Dr. John Sun led career round table discussion: Bring together from A to Z in career planning, job hunting, and career development, including practical tips on resume writing, interview preparation and how to present yourself, to negotiate better offers. In the plenary section, six speakers have shared their stories on their career path and offered tips on immigration, leadership and developing a successful career.

Dr. John Sun led the discussion on how to conduct interview section

Dr. Tycho Heimbach from Novartis kindly offered the practical tips on writing a resume and preparing for interviews, suggesting job seekers to think from the position of hiring managers. For the audience, especially students with no prior industry experience, he suggested to read NDA reviews from FDA website to gain knowledge on drug development.
After the plenary section, students and guest speakers attended Career Roundtable section. During the section, speakers shared their experience on how to develop soft skills and avoid narrow minded when searching for jobs and starting their careers. Later, the speakers organized a mock interview and set examples of bad and successful interviews, which offered great opportunities for attendees to gain experience and knowledge on future job search. Dr. Xiaoyong Yang summarized the event and gave closing remark.
